Sarraut's Regime Expected to Fall

Popular Front Captures Majority, With Nearly All Returns In.

By the United Press.

Paris, May 3.—Sweeping Communist victories in today's parliamentary run-off elections, surpassing even the most optimistic predictions, tonight threatened the cabinet of Premier Albert Sarraut.

It was announced officially at midnight that the Communists had won 71 seats in the new Chamber of Deputies which will convene June 1. At that time there were five more districts to be heard from, and it was indicated in some quarters that the Communists might win two or three of those seats.

Latest returns showed that Left Wing or Popular Front Parties had piled up a parliamentary majority of 380 seats out of 618, including eight colonial seats.

Meanwhile, Premier Sarraut called an urgent cabinet meeting "as soon as possible." The meeting probably will be held Wednesday and the cabinet may be called upon to decide its own fate.

To Discuss Vacancies.

The cabinet will discuss the possibility of filling in four vacancies, created by the defeat of three ministers and withdrawal of another, in an attempt to keep the cabinet intact until the new Parliament convenes.

Minister of Aviation Marcel Deat and Minister of Colonies Jacques Stern were defeated in the run-offs today.

Minister of Education Henri Guernut was defeated last Sunday and Minister for Public Health Louis Nicolle withdrew after failing to be elected in the first ballot.

The Communist gains were mainly at the expense of the Radical Socialists, the Independents and the Socialists.

Communists, 71; Dissident Communists, 10; Socialists, 143; Union Soicalists, 25; independent Socialists, 9; Radical Socialists, 115; independent Radicals, 31; Left Republicans, 83; Union Republican Democrats, 90; Popular Democrats, 23, and Conservatives, 11.

Communists and Socialists joyfully celebrated the Red landslide. Nearly a half million members of the Popular Front were on the streets of Paris and the suburbs at midnight, singing and shouting. There were no disorders.

Parades Staged.

At Marseilles, the victorious Leftists, waving red flags, paraded along the main streets. Police cordons were placed around the offices of conservative newspapers.

The dominant Popular Front will dictate an all-Left-Wing government to be formed as soon as Parliament convenes. Premier Sarraut's future was doubtful, as a new triumvirate composed of Communist Maurice Thorez, Socialist Leon Blum and Radical Socialist Edouard Daladier was swept into power.

It was believed certain the Sarraut government will resign shortly, perhaps coincident with the convening of Parliament.

The paraders shouted for dissolution of the Fascist Croix de Feu organization and yelled: "De la Roque to the gallows." Col. Casimir de la Roque is head of the Croix de Feu.

Unofficial leaders of the victorious Reds said their parliamentary representatives will push a program involving reform of the Bank of France and taking the profits out of war by nationalizing the munitions industries, insurance companies, railroads, power companies and public utilities.

The Communists won 26 seats in the Paris suburbs. Returns from two districts were missing. Dissident Communists won three in the suburbs, Socialists three, the Socialist Union two, Radical Socialists one and Nationalists nine.

Edouard Herriot, veteran mayor of Lyons, former premier and president of the radical Socialist Party, was re-elected in the run-offs. It marked the first time since 1905 that Herriot failed to be elected in the first ballot.

5 Groups Fight For Delegates In California

Landon's Forces Campaign for Uninstructed Representatives.

By Felix Bruner.

With the Democratic National Committee claiming the biggest Nationwide Democratic registration in history, political interest will turn this week to primary elections in Maryland, California and South Dakota and to the closing days of the primary campaign in Ohio.

Three Democratic and two Republican groups are contesting in the California primary. President Roosevelt has filed the names of 44 personally selected delegates to the Philadelphia convention.

The Democratic factions include the 'regulars,' who are for the President; a group of which Upton Sinclair is the nominal candidate and which is seeking a "Production for Use" plank in the platform, and the Townsend group, of which Representative John S. McGroarty, author of the old-age pension bill, is the nominal candidate.

Groups Are Divided.

The Republican groups are divided on the subject of instructed and uninstructed delegates. The Landon-for-President Clubs have asked friends of the Kansas Governor to vote for the uninstructed delegation, headed by Earl Warren. Another so-called Landon group is headed by William Randolph Hearst, publisher, and Gov. Frank Merriam.

In South Dakota the contest is between a slate of delegates pledged to Senator William E. Borah and an uninstructed group favored by supporters of Gov. Landon.

Although Gov. Landon's name does not appear on the ballot, his friends in that State have announced that seven of eight candidates running uninstructed have pledged themselves to vote for him "as long as his nomination appears possible." The eighth delegate, according to the Associated Press, was announced as "100 per cent for Landon."

The Borah slate is headed by Senator Norbeck. President Roosevelt is unopposed on the Democratic ballot. There is no contest for Governor in either party and no contest for Senator in the Democratic Party. On the Republican ballot C. A. Christopherson, former Congressman, and J. Chandler Gurney are candidates for the Senatorial nomination.

Ohio Republicans were reported to be speculating over cancellation of a planned Statewide rally for Gov. Landon. According to the Associated Press, E. Wilson Heisey, president of the Ohio Landon-for-President Club, announced the meeting had been called off at the suggestion of John Hamilton, head of the Landon national organization.

Declines Statement.

Hamilton declined to be quoted. Henry J. Allen, former Governor of Kansas, was to have been the speaker. Landon is not officially a candidate in Ohio.

The only Republican candidates in the primary are Senator Borah and Robert A. Taft, a "favorite son" candidate. Delegates selected will not be bound to vote for the candidates they represent. Borah is campaigning in the State. Taft has a slate of 52 delegates, and Borah a slate of 35 in the election, which will be held May 12.

"Registration figures," the Democratic committee said in a statement, "continue to reveal the largest Democratic enrollment in history."

It is said that in spite of a lack of contests, President Roosevelt received 750,000 Pennsylvania votes, the largest ever recorded for a candidate in a Presidential primary. It pointed out that the total was more than 150,000 in excess of the aggregate cast in 1934, when there were active contests.

"Registration figures in West Virginia," the statement said, "show the Democrats have a majority over the Republicans of over 103,000. In 1932,

Negro Lynched By Georgia Mob

Pavo, Ga., May 3 (AP).—John Rushin, 55-year-old Negro farm laborer, was lynched near here late today by a mob to which he confessed he killed Marion Pate, 24-year-old white man.

Deputy Sheriff Herbert Kennedy, of Thomas County, said the Negro was taken from him by a mob of "about 200 people" after he had arrested Rushin in connection with the slaying of Pate, which occurred near the scene of the lynching earlier in the day.

Kennedy said that before the mob spirited the Negro away some one asked Rushin if he killed Pate and that the Negro replied "yes" and added he had also robbed Pate.

Postoffice's Tower Fired By Lightning

Firemen Have Difficulty Reaching Blaze; Hose Lifted 300 Feet

A bolt of lightning, flashing across the sky at the height of a preseason thunderstorm, struck the 315-foot tower of the old Postoffice Building yesterday afternoon, causing it to burst into flames.

Climb Winding Stairs.

Never before did Washington firemen have such difficulty in reaching a fire. The elevators took them only about half the distance up. Through pitch blackness, they had to climb a circular stairway. Even then they were not near the fire. They had to go the remainder of the way up ladders built into the tower.

Firemen found that the extinguishers they had brought along were of no use. Thereupon they dropped a life line to the street more than 300 feet below and hauled up a hose.

With this the fire was extinguished and serious damage averted. About 20 panes of glass were broken when slate from the tower crashed through a skylight.

The great Postoffice clock, to which Washingtonians have been looking for the time since 1897, was still ticking away as the firemen departed.

The old Postoffice Building, now occupied largely by the AAA and divisions of the General Accounting office, was only one of several structures hit by lightning as the city was deluged by the heaviest rainfall of the year.

A bolt struck the 125-foot radio transmitter tower on the roof of the Riggs National Bank Building, Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, and as a result Station WRC was off the air for 29 minutes—from 3:58 to 4:27 p. m.

Lightning took Station WOL off the air for six minutes.

Another bolt struck the cupola of a house at 832 D street southeast, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Homer Allen. Fire apparatus was summoned, but no great damage had been done.

Parkview School, on Warder street near Park road, also was struck by lightning. A limestone decoration near the top was splintered.

Lightning did $4,000 damage on the farm of W. M. Deacon, near Largo, Md. The bolt ignited a barn in which were stored twenty-seven-hogsheads of tobacco and a large quantity of corn and hay, all of which was destroyed.

The storm of a type rare at this time of the year, broke shortly before 4 o'clock. From then until 9 o'clock last night 2.32 inches of rain fell, more than the fall throughout April.

Within an hour, 32 calls were received by the Fire Department, most most of them relating to flooded cellars in the Northwest section.

Manholes Torn Up.

The rail fell in such torrents that it surged over the sidewalks in most sections of the city. Downtown parks, which have been undergoing repairs, sent great streams of muddy water into adjacent streets.

So strong was the flow of water that manholes were blown from sewers at Thirteenth street and Florida avenue northeast and at Twenty-second street and New York avenue northwest.

Virginia-bound automobiles, headed for the Highway Bridge, were halted on lower Fourteenth street when water, backing up from sewers, surged over that thoroughfare. The traffic was diverted to the Arlington Memorial Bridge for an hour.

Approximately 100 small boats, most of them with sails, were cruising off Hains Point when the storm came up. Seven of them overturned, but no lives were lost.

Mussolini Orders Early Occupation

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Rome, May 3.—Fifteen thousand Askaris, native Italian troops, occupied the Entoto Hills immediately overlooking Addis Ababa today, authoritative messages from the East African war front reported tonight.

The Askaris occupied the Entoto Hills early this afternoon. They were part of the Second Division, Italian Native Corps, commanded by Gen. Pirzio Biroli. The division moved out of Dessye last month as the vanguard of a motorized column.

Mount Entoto is actually part of the City of Addis Ababa, less than three miles from the center of town.

The Askaris, it was understood, were rushed to strategic positions overlooking devastated Addis Ababa upon express orders from Premier Benito Mussolini to Marshal Pietro Badoglio.

They were ordered to occupy the city as soon as possible and lift the siege laid at the American, British and French legations by Ethiopian mobs determined to reduce Emperor Haile Selassie's abandoned capital to ashes before arrival of the invaders.

Appeals to Il Duce.

Badoglio's preparations to occupy Addis Ababa were accelerated after French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin personally appealed to Il Duce to protect beleagured foreigners there.

Earlier official dispatches from Badoglio's headquarters at Dessye said a column of Eritrean troops had reached the Addis Ababa outskirts. They were awaiting arrival of motorized units.

The Eritreans, marching on foot, camped after moving up to within sight of smoldering Addis Ababa. Three thousand trucks were roaring to their support over the imperial highway connecting Dessye and Addis Ababa.

The motorized column, at last report already had negotiated the 12,000-foot heights of Tarma Burrh.

Meanwhile, Virginio Gayda, editor of the Giornale d'Italia, Mussolini's sounding board, revealed that before he fled his country, Emperor Haile Selassie rejected Italian offers for direct peace negotiations.

Gayda said that before beginning his advance on Addis Abada from Dessye, Badolgio communicated the King of Kings and offered ot negotiate. Halie Selassie's refusal was unequivocal.

"The departure of the Negus constitutes flight—even desertion," Gayda said editorially. "For Italy it is the natural consequence of a situation created by Ethiopia. The Negus, after his defeat and after ruinous errors, collaborated with the sanctionist nations even to the extent of refusing negotiation efforts made prior to the start of the march on Addis Ababa. He had no other recourse than flight.

"His population abandoned him. The Emperor in turn abandoned them. The state of anarchy, which exploded in Addis Ababa as soon as the Negus fled, confirms that the last vestige of Ethiopian authority has departed forever. Badoglio is hailed by natives and foreigners. He must hurry his march, but no longer to fight. He must save the capital of a fallen empire."

Confidently expecting that the troops would enter Addis Ababa before nightfall, the populace prepared for wild celebrations of Italy's conquest over Ethiopia and League of Nations sanctions. Private homes were draped with flags and banners and millions gathered around radios.

Group Sent to Safety Within Confines of British Compound.

Engert Expecting To Repel Rioters

Believes Staff Can Hold Out Against All but Mobilized Attack.

By the Associated Press.

The American minister notified the State Department last night that women and children had been evacuated from the American Legation in Addis Ababa with the assistance of British diplomatic officials, but that the male members of the American staff intended to hold out at the legation.

In a message dispatched at 11 p. m., Ethiopian time, by the legation's wireless, Minister Cornelius Van H. Engert said that at his request the British Legation had sent three trucks with a military escort in which women and children in the legation, including nurses, had been escorted to safety within the well-fortified British compound.

The minister's wife, however, remained with her husband and his staff.

Engert notified the department that he expected to hold the legation against anything short of a mobilized attack, asserting that he and his staff possessed nine rifles, two shotguns, a number of pistols, and a fair amount of ammunition.

Expects to Hold Legation.

He added:

"With Vice Consul William M. Cramp, Philadelphia, and Vice Consul Robert L. Hunter, Milbank, S. Dak., and the four Navy radio men, all of whom have shown admirable courage and coolness, I expect to be able to hold the legation against anything but a mobilized attack from different directions."

The minister said that assisting him in addition to the legation's staff, were six other foreigners, including three Americans. They are a Mr. Spencer, American financial adviser to the Ethiopian government; Ben Ames, a press correspondent; Hal Dubarier, an American aviator; a White Russian named Hartman; a Greek representative of a news agency named Angelopoulos, and an unidentified Czechoslovakian in the minister's employ.

The State Department earlier announced that Secretary Hull had sent a message to Engert leaving to the latter's discretion determination whether the American Legation was to be evacuated.

British Fire On Natives.

With one American woman slain, rioting natives were fired on by British troops last night in a successful evacuation of personnel and refugees of the Turkish Legation there.

In addition to the death of Mrs. A. R. Stadin, of Loma Linda, Calif., caused by a stray bullet from rioting natives, Engert reported that a British Red Cross doctor had been wounded while driving through the streets of Addis Ababa.

The city was still smoldering from flames that vitrually had destroyed its business district and was besieged by native looters.

Mrs. Stadin was the wife of a doctor attached to the American Seventh Day Adventists Mission in Addis Ababa.

Engert reported he had heard that the Turkish Legation was in serious danger of being attacked about 5 p. m., that a squad from the British Legation guard had considerable difficulty in removing the legation personnel and other Turkish nationals quartered there, and had succeeded only after killing several Ethiopians.

Earlier, Engert had advised the department that he had evacuated a number of foreigners who had taken refuge in the American Legation with the aid of British Legation trucks.

Mrs. Stadin was killed while she slept early yesterday by a bullet which penetrated the glavanized iron roof of the Seventh Day Adventist Mission headquarters.

Subsequent reports from Engert mentioned no other American casualties, but pointed to the death of Mrs. Stadin as an illustration of the risk incurred by all foreigners while indiscriminate firing continued.

U. S. Minister's Messages

Following is an almost hour-by-hour (Addis Ababa time) account of events in Addis Ababa, Ethiopian capital, sent to the State Department yesterday by Cornelius Van H. Engert, American Minister:

9 a. m.

"Deeply regret to report the death of Mrs. Stadin, wife of Dr. A. R. Stadin, of the Seventh Day Adventist Mission, who was killed this morning at 5:15 o'clock by a stray bullet which pierced her skull.

"Dr. G. C. Bergman will endeavor to embalm the body until burial is possible.

"Please inform General Conference Seventh Day Adventists, Takoma Park, Washington, D. C."

10 a. m.

"With co-operation of British legation, which provided two trucks in charge of Vice Consul Trapman, the following were safely removed to British Legation this morning:

"Mrs. G. C. Bergman and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Hanson, two Swedish and two Norwegian nurses.

11 a. m.

"Although shooting continued all night, things seem on the whole a little quieter.

"Several fires were still smoldering this morning but heavy showers will probably prevent spreading. So far only business center destroyed except important Indian firm, Mohammedally & Co., which also escaped pillage owing to effective rifle fire of employes. Customs house near railway station was burnt early this morning with all contents.

"Accidental death of an American citizen reported in my May 3, 9 a. m., shows considerable risk incurred by all foreigners while indiscriminate firing continues. Estimated at least 200,000 rounds have been fired during last 24 hours."

3 p. m.

"Dr. Melly, of the British Red Cross, is reported to have been shot through the chest while driving through the streets but is expected to recover. This report is not confirmed."

4 p. m.

"There is reliable information to the effect that the Italian vanguard is now only about 10 or 12 miles from the city and will presumably enter it tomorrow. There is no evidence of Ethiopian resistance."

5 p. m.

"My messenger has just returned from the Sudan Interior Mission at Furi and reports everybody well and safe. There seems to have been a little anxiety for a while but nothing serious happened."

"Although messenger was unable to get through to American Mission at Gullali because of heavy firing, I believe I would have heard if they were in trouble as the mission is comparatively near the legation. However, the fact that he could not get through and that just then an Abyssinian child was shot down near our front gate and as mob was reported to be approaching made it seem wise to send message to British Legation to send trucks (to the American Legation) at least for the evacuation of Greeks and Russians, four Armenian girls and some 15 British Somalis who had joined the Greeks and Russians (at the American Legation) since yesterday. This was done and I believe they reached the British Legation safely."

7 p. m.

"News of Melly's wounding confirmed.

"I also heard that the Turkish Legation, which lies en route to the so-called Legation Quarter, was in serious danger of being attacked about 5 p. m. and that a squad from the British Legation guard had considerable difficulty in extricating legation personnel and Turkish nationals and only succeeded after killing several Abyssinians.

"Taken together with the general developments during the day, these events induced me to communicate once more with the British Legation to request several trucks be sent to evacuate, if necessary, our entire legation."

11 p. m.

"The British Legation very kindly sent not only three trucks but Consul Hope Gill, Military Attache Taylor, and Capt. Keene in command of 15 Sikhs of their legation guard.

"After obtaining from them latest information regarding the general situation, I decided to evacuate the women and children only.

"The following therefore, left tonight for the British Legation in two trucks escorted by the Sikhs: Miss B. A. Dommermuth, Avoca, Pa.; Miss E. C. French, Avoca, Pa.; Miss R. M. Shippey, Avoca, Pa., with an adopted child; my two children and their governess; Clerk Fidele, a British subject, his wife and two children; family of our Amharic scribe, Ato Yohanness, and Weeks, colored, American. Mrs. Engert desired to remain at the legation to encourage native servants whose families live in the compound and I consented.

"With Vice Consul William M. Cram and Robert L. Hunter and our four radiomen, all of whom have shown admirable courage and coolness, I expect to be able to hold the legation against anything but a mobilized attack from different directions. Following Americans are also assisting: Spencer, B. Ames and Hal Du Berrier, as well as Clerk

Ethiopian Situation.

With an American woman killed and streets strewn with unidentified dead, Ethiopia's capital last night was a smoldering shambles. Fire and pillaging still raged as Italian troops strove frantically to reach Addis Ababa, governmentless since the flight of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Fifteen thousand Askaris, native Italian soldiers, were three miles outside the capital, awaiting the arrival of motorized re-enforcements to march into the city.

Women and children were evacuated from the American Legation in Addis Ababa with the aid of British diplomatic officials, the American Minister, Cornelius Van H. Engert, reported by radio to the State Department here. Those evacuated were taken to safety within the fortified compound of the British Legation, while the male members of the American staff planned to hold the Legation against threatened Ethiopian attacks.

The French Legation, in which hundreds of Italian prisoners of war were being held, was besieged by enraged Ethiopians, with fighting reported continuing.

Rioting Rages.

Addis Ababa, May 3 (By the Associated Press and other American correspondents collaborating in use of limited wire facilities).—Fire, pillaging, murder and anarchy raged in governmentless Addis Ababa today with an American woman killed by a bullet from marauders as she slept.

The lofty capital from which Emperor Haile Selassie and his family fled early yesterday was a ghastly wreck.

In the center of town streets were strewn with corpses. Eight bodies were counted on one of them and the mutilated casualties were unestimable.

The first reported fatality among foreigners was Mrs. A. R. Stadin, wife of an American missionary doctor and who is a graduate nurse. She was killed at dawn when a bullet pierced the galvanized roof of the Seventh Day Adventist mission, where she was sleeping.

A great portion of the population was pillaging, firing, and even burning, determined to raze the capital before the

7 Boats Are Capsized by Squall In Potomac Mutton-Leg Race

Gusts of rain driven by a 60-mile wind that transformed smooth Washington Channel into a raging, bucking sea, overturned seven sailing boats in the Potomac River Sailing Association's "mutton leg" race yesterday afternoon, plunging a dozen or more occupants into the turbulent waters.

Tragedy was averted by the prompt action of sailors at the nearby Naval Air Station, who warned of the approaching high winds by the Weather Bureau, stood by with boats ready. As boat after boat capsized, the sailors dashed out in their craft, dragging the drenched racers to safety.

The boats were turning into the final stretch of the two-lap course when the wind struck, tossing the small craft about as if they were bits of wood. Most of the boatmen immediately put in for shore, but several of the hardier racers kept to the course—until overturned.

Lured by the warmth and the light breezes in the morning, 40 boat owners turned out at naval air base for the start of the race. The course was set up the channel for about half a mile to the buoy, back to the base and then over the same course for a second time.

At 3:30, despite a slightly overcast sky, the referee fired the starting gun. Most of the boats had covered the first lap and were negotiating the homestretch when the storm struck.

Sailors at the naval air station watching the course of the race and wondering whether the boats would beat the approaching storm over the finish line, said some of the boats propelled by the wind shot over the water at a rate of more than 15 miles an hour, while others

Mother Acquitted Of Poison Death

Greenville, Tex., May 3 (AP).—Mrs. Velma Patterson, 34, was acquitted today on a charge that the thrice-wed woman poisoned her 12-year-old daughter so she could carry on a romance with a cattleman.

The trial was for the death of Dorothy McCasaland. Mrs. Patterson still is charged with poisoning another daughter, Billie Fae McCasland, 11.

The defense held that the children died of intestinal influenza and placed on the witness stand friends who told of the mother's love for the daughters. Exhumation of the bodies and the announcement of a chemist that he found identical poisons led to the charges.

The jury was given the case late yesterday.

Landon Clubs Fear 'Sell Out' In California

Urge Backers to Vote Tomorrow for Delegation Uninstructed.

With Republicans of the Nation intent on the outcome of the primary election in California tomorrow, fresh fuel has been added in the controversy over selection of the State's delegation to the party's national convention, it was learned here yesterday.

The Landon for President Clubs, with headquarters at Los Angeles and claiming to be the first such organization created outside the State of Kansas, has appealed to backers of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the Presidential nomination, to vote for the Earl Warren uninstructed delegation in preference to the so-called Landon slate sponsored by William Randolph Hearst, publisher, and Gov. Frank Merriam of California.

Over the signature of E. R. Case, secretary, the organization has circulated copies of resolutions adopted by the clubs on April 18, asserting that Gov. Landon's cause "would best be served by supporting the uninstructed delegation, a very large proportion of which is known to be personally friendly to Gov. Landon."

Aimed at Hearst, Merriam.

The club's action bears out the understanding in the Capital that the fight on the Landon-pledged delegate ticket is not aimed at Gov. Landon but at domination of the State's delegation by Hearst and Gov. Merriam.

The resolutions assert that:

"This organization believes that important pressure was placed upon Gov. Landon by the Hearst-Merriam forces in their attempts to further their personal plans at the expense of both Gov. Landon and the Republican Party."

They then declare the organization "believes thoroughly in the honor, the integrity, and the outstanding character of the men and women composing the so-called uninstructed delegation nominally pledged to Earl Warren (the State chairman), but to be released by him, but is not entirely satisfied with certain of the delegates on the so-called Landon ticket or with the forces which brought that ticket into being."

Would Block "Sell Out."

Reference then is made to the California support of John N. Garner, also sponsored by Hearst, in the 1932 Democratic campaign, with the assertion that "this organization also wishes to avoid any possibility of having Gov. Landon's candidacy sold out as Garner was sold out in California four years ago."

The reference recalled the California backing given Garner for the Democratic nomination at the Chicago convention throughout the fight between the Roosevelt and Al Smith forces. With the Roosevelt forces leading but still lacking the needed two-thirds vote, William Gibbs McAdoo, leading the California delegation, took the floor and threw the Garner delegates' strength to Roosevelt, thereby avenging the blocking of his own nomination by Al Smith in the bitter 1924 convention at New York. Garner, next day, was made the Vice Presidential nominee.

The Landon Clubs' resolution closes with the statement that:

"It is with deep regret that this organization makes public its recommendation, but it can do no other in the higher interest of the Governor himself, and of the Republican Party in the State and in the Nation, since this action is taken in the belief that principles must always come before political expediency."

The Landon for President Clubs are headed by John N. White, as campaign manager; Case; Margot Hoppe, executive secretary; J. W. MacDowell, treasurer, and David D. Sallee, general counsel.

What effect issuance of the resolutions will have in the election of Republican delegates tomorrow was a matter of speculation here, but it did tend to make it even clearer that defeat of the Landon-pledged slate would not necessarily be a defeat for Gov. Landon. It is known that many of those on the uninstructed slate are favorable to Landon, but the unpledged delegation is being supported by many to prevent control of the State's representatives at the national convention by Hearst and Merriam.

Former President Hoover and a considerable faction of Republicans in California, from the start of the campaign, have favored sending an uninstructed delegation to the Cleveland convention.

3 Saw Way From Jail; One Named in Slaying

Lisbon, Ohio, May 3 (AP).—Three men, including one charged with first degree murder, sawed their way from the Columbiana County jail today.

The men are Burl Rogers, 27, of East Liverpool, charged with the Christmas Day slaying of Clarence Dickey; Roy McDole, 21, East Liverpool, convicted of driving an automobile without consent of the owner, and Albert Wright, alias Albert Straley, 19, East Palestine, charged with forgery and driving without consent.

William Virden, deputy and turnkey, said all three were in their cell, when the Sunday noon meal was served. Their absence was discovered shortly before 2 p. m., he said.

Estimate Of Deficit Again Shows New Deal's Disregard For Accurate Arithmetic.

By Franklyn Waltman

SURPRISE and amazement were widespread last week when Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau told the Senate Finance Committee that the Federal Government would end this fiscal year on June 30 with a deficit in the neighborhood of $5,966,600,000—the largest peace-time deficit in the history of the country.

WALTMAN

The revelation—if it could be called that—should have surprised none. It has been clearly forecast since the day President Roosevelt in effect surrendered the fight against cash payment of the World War veterans' bonus. Anyone familiar with the pending budget and the bonus act has known for weeks that this fiscal year's deficit would set a new record, although it may not be as high as estimated by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Yet those who do not devote themselves to studying such affairs, but rely on pronouncements of the President regarding the Treasury's situation had good reason to be amazed and perplexed by Secretary Morgenthau's statement. Fresh in their ears was the statement made less than a week previously by President Roosevelt in his speech to the National Democratic Club of New York City.

The President was explaining how some of his critics complained of the unbalanced budget and what answer he made to such complaints.

"I tell them," he said, "that whereas the deficit of the Federal Government this year is about $3,000,000,000, the national income of the United States has risen from $35,000,000,000 in the year 1932 to $65,000,000,000 in the year 1936 . . ."

* * *

And parenthetically, it might be said that the President was as accurate in his recital of national income figures as he was in stating the deficit. The Department of Commerce gives the national income for 1932 as $39,545,000,000—only $4,500,000,000 more than the sum named by the President, just as his Secretary of the Treasury names a deficit approximately $3,000,000,000 greater than the figure used by the President. And his estimate of $65,000,000,000 as the national income for this year is a pure guess. The estimates of most experts average about $60,000,000,000, accordingg to a dispatch in the New York Times.

* * *

Well, what are a few billions of dollars to Mr. Roosevelt? But it is exactly this nonchalance, this indifference in dealing with gigantic sums of public money on the part of the President that is so disturbing to men and women who can add four apples to two apples and conclude they have six apples—instead of eight apples, as did the pitiful Hoes family in the current novel.

Thus has it been ever since the New Deal started—a flagrant disregard for accurate arithmetic. The Administration started out to redeem a promise to reduce expenses of the Federal Government 25 per cent; then it commenced exaggerating estimated expenditures and deficits; then the President in his budget message for 1935 held out the hope for a balanced budget in the 1936 fiscal year, including relief expenditures, with the national debt held at not more than $31,834,000,000.

But when he submitted his budget for the 1936 fiscal year, he estimated a deficit for that period of $4,500,000,000, with a public debt at the end of $34,329,000,000. And both in his last budget message and in his subsequent tax message to Congress—the latter long after the bonus was passed—Mr. Roosevelt proudly pointed out that his computations meant a reduction in the deficit for the third successive year. But now the truth comes that instead of a decrease in the deficit, it will reach a new peace-time high.

* * *

Of course the Administration is quite right in saying that there would have been a decrease in the deficit if it had not been for invalidation of the AAA taxes and passage of the bonus payment act—which the President vetoed, but did not otherwise try very hard to block this year either before or after its passage.

But it is likewise true that if it were not for the so-called relief and recovery expenditures, were it not for the many New Deal agencies created in the last three years, we would have a balanced budget now.

In the field of arithemetic and budget balancing, what difference does it make what items create the deficit? Perhaps next year we shall segregate the inordinate national defense expenses from the regular budget and assert that if it were not for those—made necessary, it will be said, by the warlike intentions of others—we would have a balanced budget.

At all events, despite how it is spent, it comes out, or will come out, of the taxpayers' pocket—which means a more or less diminished standard of living for him, either in less income to spend as he pleases or in higher prices for the things he buys. All the rest is just sugar-coating to conceal the taste of the pill.

* * *

But, plaintively cry the New Dealers, haven't people a "right" to live, haven't poor farmers a "right" to decent homesteads and equipment, haven't all boys and girls a "right" to college educations—in brief, doesn't the Declaration of Independence assert that all men are born free and equal? Well, then, why should we not spend the money to give people the things they have a "right" to?

Since all this is so much fiction, the answer will be found in that charming novel of Josephine Lawrence's "If I Have Four Apples." It should be required reading for all New Dealers.

3 Drowned When Auto Plunges Into Stream

Albany, Tex., May 3 (AP).—Two women and a man were swept to death today by a rain-swollen creek into which their automobile plunged after crashing through a bridge railing.

The victims were identified by county officers as Claude Hartgrove, Miss Wardine Raines and Mrs. Albert Carter, all of Sweetwater.

The bodies of the women were found in the submerged car. The man's body was recovered from flooded Salem Creek. A near cloudburst sent the creek out of its banks.

Townsend Unit Threat Spurs House Inquiry

InterestRekindled as OARP Announces Plans to Enter Election.

By the Associated Press.

The announced intention of Townsend old-age pension leaders to throw the force of their organization into the coming elections yesterday rekindled Congressional interest in the resumption of hearings tomorrow before a House investigating committee.

As the committee prepared to question Dr. F. E. Townsend, cofounder of the plan, Chairman Bell (Democrat), Missouri, characterized a call for a motor caravan from Los Angeles to Washington to seek enactment of the Townsend Plan into law as "another cruel hoax upon the aged and infirm."

The OARP, in a formal statement, said the caravan would bring to the Capital "a complete list containing the names of each and every person who has indorsed the Townsend movement" which the organization said was asked in a committee subpena.

The organization estimated 10,000,000 indorsements would be contained in the petitions, brought here by "autos volunteered by enthusiastic Townsendites."

"Mass meetings will be held each night at some city along the route."

The OARP said efforts were being made to "prevent any possibility of the caravan being turned into a 'march on Washington.'"

Sub-committees, which have been working in California and Michigan, have obtained information which Bell said would be used as a basis for questioning Dr. Townsend.

Woman Killed, 3 Hurt When Plane Hits Tree

Detroit, May 3 (AP).—Miss Sadie Rowley, 34, of Dearborn, a suburb, was killed, and Joseph M. Charlton, also of Dearborn, suffered a fracture of the collarbone as the plane in which they were returning today from the Kentucky Derby struck a tree near the city airport.

Morrell Banker, a third passenger, and Homer Bond, pilot, escaped with minor bruises.

Both wings of the plane were ripped off as it struck the tree.

California Primary Fight

the Republicans had a majority of 22,169.

"On the Pacific Coast, the figures available from Oregon show a sharp increase in Democratic registration. In 1932, although the registered Republicans outnumbered the Democrats by 172,000, President Roosevelt easily carried the State in the fall election. This year the estimated Republican registration has been reduced by approximately 100,000.

"Revised figures from Wisconsin show that in the primaries for that State, President Roosevelt's total was more than 215,000 in excess of the total cast for Senator Borah the leading candidate in the Republican primaries."

Meanwhile, Senator Barbour (Republican), New Jersey, in a radio talk attacked the administration of relief, a foremost campaign issue.

"I think," he said, "we could take adequate care of the unemployed during the coming year by using money already in the Treasury. This would help the unemployed and it would help the taxpayer, too.

"It means, in figures, that we would not need that extra $1,500,000,000 which the New Deal wants to take from our pockets. It also means that the budget would be nearer in balance."

Barbour said the WPA costs more than the old CWA, "which so reeked with graft and incompetence that even its administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, could not stand the smell of it."

The money that finally reaches the unemployed, he said, is only a portion of the funds the President has at his disposal, part of it going "toward maintaining huge offices and large armies of bureaucrats in Washington, and part into the hands of purely partisan politicians."

Barbour insisted that relief should be administered by the States.

"They will administer relief with a minimum of expense and a maximum of efficiency," he said.

Prohibitionists Seek to Change Name of Party

By the Associated Press.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 3.—A bitter battle over liberalization of the Prohibition Party and a proposal to change its name loomed today as the first delegates arrived here for the opening Tuesday of the National Prohibition convention.

The first skirmish of the convention on these controversial questions is expected tomorrow night when the executive committee meets in the pre-convention session.

Edward N. Blake, of Chicago, chairman of the committee, arrived last night. He was the first to intimate the existence of dissension when he said that Harley W. Kidder, of Barre, Vt., national secretary, had designated another hotel as the headquarters of the national committee.

Holmes said that Blake was in opposition to his faction's desire to liberalize the party and change its name so as to "meet the issues as they exist."

He accused Blake of "steam-rollering" previous conventions and said he would bring the matter to an "open fight" on the convention floor if similar tactics were adopted at the convention.

In naming the members of the executive committee, Blake did not list Holmes and said he considered him out "of the party." He said Holmes would be permitted to meet with the committee tomorrow night. Holmes said he had the support of Kidder and National Treasurer Will J. Martin, of Hasbrouk, Heights, N. J.

A Pride and Joy in Millions of Homes with the aid of Instalment Buying

Back in 1920 the average price of an "ice machine" was about $600.00—cash. Only well-to-do families could buy . . . sales were small, production costly.

Then, following the lead of the automobile industry, instalment selling was introduced. Since that time millions of responsible families have enjoyed mechanical refrigerators while paying for them on the instalment plan.

Now 1/4 the 1920 Price

As sales increased, prices dropped and mass production led to more reliable, more economical and better looking refrigerators. So that today you can get a roomy, mechanically perfect product for about one-quarter the 1920 price, whether you pay cash or buy on the C. I. T. Budget Plan.

Inventive genius and mass production plus instalment selling make mass consumption possible. Former luxuries for the favored few are now within the reach of the average pocketbook. Volume and payrolls increase, products improve and prices come down.

Since 1908, C. I. T. has had a leading part in achieving these results. With the aid of C. I. T. Budget Plan the lives of millions of Americans have been enriched by automobiles, washing machines, radios and other modern conveniences which have been bought out of earnings.

By helping industry serve prudent, dependable people, who need the convenience of time payments, C. I. T. makes the home an easier, happier place to live in.

U. S. Continues Karpis Inquiry On Kidnapings

'Public Enemy No. 1. May Be Arraigned Today in Hamm Case.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Minn., May 3.—A secret interrogation of Alvin Karpis, "Public Enemy No. 1," was continued today by Federal agents determined to draw from the gangster's own lips a list of those who aided his two-year flight from the law.

A heavy guard barred the Federal court building doors behind which Karpis was hustled after being flown here from New Orleans to answer kidnaping charges.

The department's determination to make a decisive mop-up of the Karpis-Barker mob's camp followers was announced by J. Edgar Hoover, investigation bureau chief. Before leaving for New York he predicted arrest of some Karpis friends.

How soon the captured public enemy would be turned over to the United States marshal for arraignment was still undetermined, although Hoover had said arraignment on the William Hamm, jr., kidnaping case might be tomorrow.

Karpis was questioned in the Department of Justice office, where other members of his notorious gang previously had faced their captors, some to talk and others to be shunted along to Alcatraz prison for life.

Of more than two score persons originally indicted in connection with the kidnapings of Hamm and Edward G. Bremer, members of two of the wealthiest families in the Northwest, only one man remains free—Harry Campbell, lame outlaw last seen with Karpis in Atlantic City.

In addition to the kidnapings, which he is alleged to have engineered, the Federal agents questioned Karpis on more than a dozen spectacular bank robberies, several daring mail robberies, and a number of killings.

Missouri officials attempted to have the mobster taken to West Plains, Mo., to stand trial for the killing of Sheriff C. R. Kelley on December 19, 1931. They pointed out that Karpis could be executed on this first-degree murder charge, but would escape with a life term at most for either the Bremer or Hamm kidnapings.

Hamm Kidnaping Trial to Be First

New York, May 3 (U.P.).—Alvin Karpis will be tried first in St. Paul on a Federal charge of kidnaping William Hamm, jr., after which he will be surrendered to Missouri if that State wants to try him for murder, J. Edgar Hoover said tonight.

The chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation revealed that the terrified Karpis had expected to be killed when he was captured by Federal men in New Orleans.

"He admitted he never expected to be taken alive," Hoover said. "When he was taken he was the most frightened man I have ever seen. His knees were literally knocking together and he thought that even then we were going to kill him.

"On the way down to our New Orleans headquarters from the apartment, he asked: 'When are you going to let us have it?'

"Even after we got to the office, and later in the plane, he was still afraid we were going to bump him off."

Woman Friend 'Talked,' Is Report

New Orleans, May 3 (A.P.).—Prodded by Federal agents, the attractive red-haired woman friend of Alvin Karpis was believed to have "talked" today.

But there was no word coming from the inquisitors as to what they obtained from the woman of mystery captured here Friday night with the long-sought criminal.

The slim, modishly dressed woman identified herself only as "Ruth" when she and Fred Hunter, alleged Ohio mail robber, were corraled with Karpis.

Baltimorean Injured In Night Club Fight

Herman Alpher, 25, of Baltimore, Md., was in serious condition in Emergency Hospital last night with a fractured skull after, according to police, he was beaten up in a night club just across the Highway Bridge, in Virginia.

Alpher was brought to the hospital early yesterday by George M. Chadwick, of the 800 block E street northwest. Chadwick said Alpher was struck on the head with a bottle by an unidentified man.

Spanish Radicals Burn Convent, Accusing Nuns

Madrid, May 3 (A.P.).—Extremists burned the Los Angeles Convent Church tonight, accusing nuns of distributing poisoned candy to girls sheltered there.

Socialist youths had to rescue the girls from the flames. Before the fire seven were injured in a clash in front of the church over the poison candy charges.

Extremists then fired the convent, claiming several shots came from inside the walls.

Barber Says 'Friend' Drowned Wife After Snake-Torture

Charges Cafe Worker Suggested Using Spiders to Kill Bride; Asserts He and Former Sailor Conceived Death Plot to Collect Insurance.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 3 (A.P.).—District Attorney Buron Fitts announced today that Robert S. James, accused of torturing his fifth wife with rattlesnakes and drowning her, hurled the same charges back at his accuser, Charles Hope.

Last night, the prosecutor said, James confessed he drowned 28-year-old Mary Busch James and left her body in a fishpont to simulate an accident, but denied the charge he forced her foot into a box of venomous snakes in an effort to kill her with their poison.

In a new statement today, Fitts said, the often-married barber named Hope, a 37-year-old cafe worker and former sailor, as the actual killer, and charged Hope proposed black widow spiders as the instrument of death before the snake episode and the eventual drowning.

"All you have to do is throw them in bed with her," the latest James statement quoted Hope as saying after he brought a box of the poisonous insects to the James home.

Found in Fishing Pond.

Mrs. James was found, face down, in the fish pond of her La Crescenta home. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental drowning, with a possibility admitted that a sting of some kind on the woman's leg might have been a contributory cause of death.

James' statement, taken today after Hope had repeated his charges that James drowned his wife in the bathtub after forcing her bare foot into a box filled with snakes, encompassed two other "death plots" for which the barber charged Hope was responsible.

"My wife was sick at this time," James' statement said. "Hope talked to me and he said: 'she's going to die anyway, why don't you kill her?'

"I told him I couldn't do it. He said, 'let me do it.' I said, 'how would you do it?'

"'Well,' he said, 'I'll take her up here and I'll shoot her in a hold-up.'

"I said: 'yes, there have been a lot of people hung for that.'"

Hope's second suggestion, the barber charged, involved "some kind of white powder in a box."

To Hope's story that James had strapped his wife, gagged, to the table for the "snake torture," James countered that Hope had represented himself to Mrs. James as a medical student, that he persuaded her to lie on the table and be strapped while he performed an illegal operation on her.

James said he left the house at this time, returning later to find Hope drunk and Mrs. James in bed.

"Hope said he put her foot in the box with one snake and it bit her three times," James' statement continued. "He said to me, 'I don't know what is the matter with her, unless the snake has bitten so many things he's not poison. It doesn't have any effect on her at all.'"

James said then he suggested "calling it off," but Hope objected that they had "gone too far." Hope, he said, told him to go to work and that he would "take care of her." James said Hope had promised to burn down the house.

Drowned in Bathtub.

Instead, James declared, Hope told him, he had drowned Mrs. James in the bathtub.

"You fool, that's the worst thing you could have done," James said he told Hope. "I had a wife drown in a bathtub in Colorado a little while ago."

James' third wife, Winona Wallace James, was drowned in a bathtub in a tourist cottage at Manitou, Colo., in October, 1932.

James charged the plot to kill Mrs. James was conceived by both Hope and himself to collect on her double indemnity insurance policy, and that Hope was to receive half the insurance.

Hope, in James' presence, denied the barber's story.

"I was never alone with her at any time," he said.

Later in the day James and Hope were taken to a Long Beach snake pit where Mike Allman, proprietor, identified them as men who had purchased a snake from him.

Dorothy Smith Wins.

Oakland, Md., May 3.—Miss Dorothy Smith, Kitzmiller High School student, won the essay contest conducted in conjunction with National Youth Week at the local high school. Miss Helen Houck, Grantsville, was second; Charles Ross, jr., of Friendsville, third, and Irene Rodeheaver and Lucile Hoye, tied for fourth honors.

Freighter Sinks After Collision; Crew Is Saved

City of Auckland Picks Up Canadian Vessel's Sailors in Fog.

By the Associated Press.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., May 3.—Two freighters collided in a dense fog off this port early today. No lives were lost although one vessel went down shortly after her crew took to the life boats.

The ships were the City of Auckland, bound from Boston to New York, on the last leg of a run from Calcutta, India, and the Canadian ship, Canadian Planter, en route from New York to Halifax, after a journey from Australia.

The crash occurred about 1:30 a. m. The City of Auckland sent out a call for help. The Coast Guard cutter Mojave, on patrol off Cape Cod, sped to the scene.

Before she arrived, however, the Canadian Planter's crew of 50 manned the boats. The sailors were picked up by the City of Auckland. One, reported seriously burned, was taken on the Mojave. The sea was smooth at the time.

The Canadian Planter went down shortly after she was abandoned. The prow protruded from the water.

Dense fog prevented the Coast Guard from determining the extent of damage to the sunken vessel. The City of Auckland reported she was undamaged, but observers on shore, with powerful glasses, saw a damaged prow.

The crash occurred about midway between this island and the Island of Nantucket, near the Cross Rip Lightship.

Late today the City of Auckland, with the Canadian crew still aboard, started slowly from the scene, toward New York.

Voyage of Liner Delayed by Damage

New York, May 3 (A.P.).—A scheduled voyage of the Panama Pacific liner California was canceled today after the vessel had returned to port with a disabled motor.

A previously scheduled sailing was canceled six weeks ago as a result of a strike by members of the crew.

Line officials announced there was no evidence of shortage after an examination of the crippled motor.

Marine engineers were unable to determine what caused the electro-turbine to burn out when the ship rounded Barnegat Light yesterday en route to the West Coast.

The vessel, towed back to port, will be out of service for the next six weeks, officials said. Refunds were offered the 250 passengers who had remained aboard in the hope that repairs would be effected by tomorrow. Estimates of the damage ranged from $90,000 to $250,000.

Excursion Boat Rammed; One Dead, 20 Hurt

U. S. Inquiry to Follow Collision With Freight Vessel in N. Y. Fog.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—A Sunday fishing excursion boat was rammed in a dense fog off Ambrose Lightship today by a 4,772-tone freighter, causing at least one death and injuries to a score of the excursionists spilled into the water.

Brooklyn authorities, who questioned officers of the Bull Line freighter Angelina made no charges, but said there probably would be a Federal investigation of the accident, which occurred 2 miles off shore.

Early reports that one or more persons were missing were denied by police, who said their check showed that all 43 passengers and 5 members of the crew of the fishing sloop were accounted for.

The man killed, apparently about 35 years of age, was not immediately identified. Most of those listed as injured were suffering principally from shock and exposure. Five remained at hospitals, while the others returned to their homes.

Other fishing craft in the vicinity picked up the 48 persons who had been on the excursion craft, the sloop M. J. R. 3d.

The captain of the M. J. R. 3d, Frank Polecek, said his boat was at anchor when the crash came. She was abandoned, but did not sink.

Virginian Urges Super Highway Plan for State

By the Associated Press.

Bristol, Va., May 3.—An eight-point plan for the solution of Virginia's highway problems, embracing abolition of the State Highway Commission and the construction of 2,000 miles of "Parkway," was advocated tonight by Henry Roberts, of Bristol, pioneer Virginia good roads leader.

Roberts proposed that to construct the parkway the State set aside annually for ten years $3,500,000 now used for local road purposes; $2,300,000 now received per annum in Federal aid; the annual increase in gas tax revenue; levy an additional one-cent per gallon gas tax to produce $2,500,000 additional annually, making a total of $138,000,000 for the new super highway.

He proposed that from 2,000 to 2,500 miles of rights-of-way, at least 200 feet in width, be selected, that both sides of the rights-of-way be fenced, that intersections be provided for the use of through traffic in getting on and off the parkway; that the State acquire sufficient land for State-owned and controlled lunch stands, overnight stopping places and parks; and that the selected route "miss every village town and city in the State, except Richmond, and every highway and road, except at necessary intersections."

Higher Payments Sought by HOLC

By the Associated Press.

Home Owners Loan Corporation officials reported yesterday that approximately 175,000 borrowers will be called upon next month to double their payments on mortgage loans, increasing HOLC receipts by about $2,500,000 monthly.

These borrowers thus far have been making only interest payments, taking advantage of a privilege extended on all loans made prior to April 27, 1934. The monthly payments, which now average around $13, will be increased to about $27, effective June 13.

Under terms of the HOLC act, the higher payments will be required to provide for retirement of the principle of mortgage debts. For loans on which principle payments were delayed, a 12-year amortization period is provided.

The additional payments will go to retire bonds issued by the corporation.

$212,460 Is Received By Presbyterian Unit

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 3.—The Southern Presbyterian committee on Christian education and ministerial relief received a total of $212,460.02 for use in its work during the fiscal year ending March 31, an increase of $11,961.37 over the preceding year.

These figures were disclosed in the committee's annual report, just completed here for presentation to the general assembly of the church, at its diamond jubilee anniversary meeting May 21-27 in Augusta, Ga.

May Dedicated to Virgin Mary In Catholic Church Ceremonies

175 Girls March in Annual Procession at Immaculata Seminary; Observance Is Held at Holy Cross and Other Locations.

The Blessed Mother, to whom members of the Catholic Church dedicate the month of May, was honored at festive ceremonies yesterday afternoon in Washington.

At Immaculata Seminary a statue of the Blessed Virgin was symbolically crowned as 175 girls of the school marched in annual May procession. Members of the Sodality Union met in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University for their annual demonstration in honor of the Blessed Mother.

Other exercises were conducted at Holy Cross Academy, where students and alumni joined in annual rosebush planting rites.

Frances Sullivan Is Queen.

Frances Sullivan was May Queen in the Immaculata Seminary ceremony and attended by four schoolmates crowned the statue of the Virgin. Her attendants were Helen Hickey, Patricia Westover, Margaret Kenny and Betty McCormac. Many of the 175 girls in the procession received their first communion yesterday morning.

The Rev. William F. Stricker, assistant pastor of St. Matthew's Church, delivered the sermon on "The Blessed Virgin" at the Sodality service in the Immaculate Conception Shrine. Mgr. David T. O'Dwyer celebrated the solemn benediction. The Rev. Laurence J. Kelly, S. J., pastor of St. Aloysius Church, and rector of Gonzaga High School, was deacon of the services; the Rev. Dennis C. Keenan, pastor of St. Teresa's Church, was subdeacon, and the Rev. Louis M. Albert, director of St. Gabriel's Sodality, was master of ceremonies.

Musical Program Rendered.

Margaret Walsh, director of the Sodality Union Choir, and Margret Breen, organist, had charge of the musical program, which included the presentation of St. Gregory's "Regina Coeli."

Because of the late afternoon storm, ceremonies at Holy Cross Academy were moved from the outdoors to the foyer of the academy building. The rose planting rites were conducted there, as was a benediction, celebrated by the Rev. John Robinson, C. S. C., who is head of the Holy Cross Seminary.

Talks were made by Mrs. Gerald Egan, president of the Holy Cross Alumnae Association; Margaret McCloud, president of the 1935, and Marcia Creecy, president of the senior class.

Methodist Merger Predicted at Parley

Columbus, Ohio, May 3 (AP).—Spokesmen for the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church predicted tonight an overwhelming approval of a plan of unification with the other branches of Methodism when delegates vote on the proposal tomorrow.

The plan, drafted by a commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, must go, if approved by the conference here, to the annual conferences and to both the general and annual conferences of the other two churches.

Unification leaders said they saw no obstacles in the path of the program, and predicted that by 1938—when the general conference of the Southern Church meets—more than 8,000,000 Methodists would merge into the largest Protestant Church in the world.

Youth Who Snatched Pocketbook Sought

A pocketbook containing $97 and a diamond ring valued at $50, was snatched from Mrs. Alice Whitelock, of 443 Jefferson street northwest, as she was walking near her home last night.

She described the thief as a white man about 22 years old. She said he ran to an automobile bearing Maryland license plates and then drove off.

Scrub Apple Sales Affect Good Crop

Hagerstown, Md., May 3.—Less than 10,000 barrels of apples of a total of 125,000 placed in cold storage in this section last fall, still remain in storage here.

The local storage plant still has 780 of the 24,200 barrels placed in storage here last fall, while the Waynesboro plant has 15,000 bushels remaining of the 230,000 stored there. At Hancock, about the same percentage remains.

Growers say that many of the second and third grades of apples, which ordinarily go into the making of cider and to canning plants, were not sold for that purpose last fall, and as a result made their appearance in the domestic market during the winter. As a result, best grades did not bring top prices.

The export trade, however, was good during the winter, many apples being shipped to England and Germany, as well as to Belgium and Argentina.

Erosion Tests Will Be Made Along Ivy River

Agricultural Department Will Start Mapping Watershed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 3.—Climaxing nine months of effort on the part of the county agent, the chamber of commerce and the farmers of Albemarle, a soil-erosion demonstration area has been approved for the Ivy River watershed by the Secretary of Agriculture, it was announced yesterday by Lyman Carrier, State co-ordinator of the Federal Soil Conservation Service.

The area comprises approximately 23,000 acres, or 150 farms in the Ivy district. Bids now are being advertised for an aerial map of the region, and work is expected to start within three weeks.

When the map has been completed, agronomists will start work classifying the soils and the degree of erosion, making an inventory of the soils on the various farms. This information will be placed on the map. Experts will then go into the area and work out a cropping system that will keep the crops from washing away. Farmers will agree to follow the approved practices for five years, it is said.

The Federal Government is interested in this work, Carrier said, because 9,000,000 acres of land in Virginia are subject to erosion, and more than a quarter of a million acres have been rendered completely useless by erosion.

Greyhound Corp. Plans 4-to-1 Stock Split-up

The Greyhound Corporation has applied to the I. C. C. for authority to carry out the stock split-up plan voted by the board of directors in March. It is proposed that the outstanding common stock shall be split into four shares for each one outstanding without par value.

The application stated that it is believed a lower market price will bring about a wider distribution of the stock and will be desirable from the point of view of customer ownership and future financing.

Justice Wheat's Wife Is Dead Of Pneumonia

Resident Here Since 1922 Was Active in Charities and Club Work.

Mrs. Gertrude Burd Wheat, wife of Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Supreme Court, died yesterday in her Mayflower Hotel apartment of pneumonia. She had been ill only a short time.

A resident of Washington since 1922, when the Chief Justice was appointed special assistant to the Attorney General, she was active in charitable work and was member of the Washington Club and St. Thomas Protestant Episcopal Church.

Funeral services will be conducted at the church at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Private interment will follow in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Wheat, a native of Nyack, N. Y., met the chief justice while he was a young lawyer practicing in New York City. They were married in February 17, 1912, and lived in New York for ten years.

During the seven years that Judge Wheat served as assistant to the Attorney General he argued more than 100 cases before the Supreme Court. He was appointed to the District Supreme Court bench in 1929 by President Herbert Hoover and was made chief justice in 1930.

About two years ago while visiting in New York, Mrs. Wheat fell and broke her arm. Since then her health has been poor. Last summer she and Judge Wheat went to Italy for her health.

Mrs. Wheat had been an active member of the Washington Club and regularly attended the club's lectures on literature and public affairs.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Wheat is survived by a daughter by a previous marriage, Mrs. John Appleton Burnham, of Marblehead, Mass., and a grandson, John Appleton, jr., a student at Harvard University.

Clarifying Political Trends.

It is never entirely safe to make a list of potential candidates for a minority party's Presidential nomination, for most Senators, a large number of Representatives and a sprinkling of Governors consider themselves eligible for a term in the White House. As the date for the Republican National Convention approaches, however, the range of probable choice is narrowed to a relatively few individuals. There is very little chance of the nomination being given to anyone who is not now an avowed candidate.

On the Democratic side, there is no opposition worth considering to the renomination of President Roosevelt. That party's appeal to the electorate is inextricably associated with the record of the present Administration. Interest in the Philadelphia convention will center chiefly in the platform pledges designed to extend the New Deal into the next four years.

On the Republican side, a number of men who were considered "dark horses" a few months ago have now virtually dropped out of the picture. Others have tested their strength in primary elections without making an impressive showing. Still others are working quietly to solidify their strength without making an active campaign for convention delegates.

In some respects the situation has been clarified by the indirect announcement of Senator Vandenberg's candidacy. There is, of course, no element of surprise in the Senator's arrangements to have his name submitted to the convention. His leadership in various searching attacks upon the Administration in the Senate have clearly betrayed his Presidential ambitions. Although he does not intend to conduct an active campaign, as Senator Borah and Col. Knox have done, he will doubtless be in a strategic position to take advantage of any deadlock that might develop between candidates who are farther out in the lead.

At present it does not appear, however, that there will be a protracted struggle at Cleveland. The strength which Gov. Landon has shown without making an active fight for delegates puts him in a commanding position. If the trend of opinion among Republican voters continues to run in his favor as it has done in recent weeks, the choice may be fairly clear-cut before the convention assembles.

To Clinch The Argument.

Washingtonians who take only a casual interest in civic affairs may feel bewildered at the debate now raging between local civic agencies and a small bloc of Congressmen over the District health appropriation for 1937. So much has been charged and so much denied that a natural suspicion may have arisen as to the complete accuracy of the statements made by either side. Can conditions be as bad as District spokesmen claim? Or is it the men on Capitol Hill who exaggerate? These are fair questions which should be carefully answered.

At last a final reply to such queries has been provided. The United States Public Health Service has just completed a survey of the causes of death in 26 States, Hawaii and the District of Columbia as reported for 1935. A true and horrible picture of conditions in Washington is to be found by comparing statistics. To begin with, the general death rate of the Nation's Capital is the highest recorded, being 17 per 1,000 as compared with 10.8 for 25 States; the closest rival for this negative distinction is Maryland with a figure of 12.3. The District also shows the greatest gain in maternal mortality: last year 6.1 of every 1,000 obstetrical cases proved fatal as compared with 3.6 in 1934; the rate for 24 States was 5.3 per 1,000.

Infant mortality in this city is recorded at a rate of 59 per 1,000 live births as against 52 in 24 States. Typhoid doubled its killing powers here with a total of 3.2 per 100,000 instead of 1.6 for the preceding year; the rate for 26 States was 1.9. Furthermore, Washington led the list when it came to death rates for pneumonia, meningitis, tuberculosis, cancer and heart disease. And it ranked second in respect to infantile paralysis, diphtheria, apoplexy and nephritis.

There can be no doubt as to the accuracy of these figures. The United States Public Health Service, at least, has no bias. What more could be said to establish the urgent need for more adequate public health funds?

Up To The Speaker.

The rules of the House of Representatives stipulate that the second and fourth Mondays of the legislative month shall be devoted to measures concerning the District of Columbia, provided the District Committee claims them. The latitude of the Speaker of the House to alter this arrangement is limited. Only in the case of revenue bills, or that of a conference report, is he entitled to deny District legislation preference on those two Mondays.

For that reason, Washingtonians have a right to know, and should make their demand for information vocal, just why the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill is to be brought to a vote on May 11, of all days. Added to other accumulating evidence, it begins to appear that this District day is chosc.. at least in part to prevent action on the Sisson bill, repealing the notorious "red rider." May 11, if is to be noted, will be the next to the last District day during this session of Congress, if the plans of House leaders hold.

The advocates of the "red rider," originally imposed by trickery and now maintained against the unanimous opposition of all who value American traditions, are obviously afraid to face a House vote on the issue. For weeks now their tactics have concentrated on preventing any action, which would mean that the insulting interference with academic freedom in local schools would continue at least another year.

To this cowardly and contemptible procedure Speaker Byrns is now making himself a party. He was responsible for refusing the Sisson bill its place on the calendar of April 27. He will also be responsible if this policy of sabotage is continued on May 11. Heretofore Mr. Byrns has been able to find fairly plausible arguments for his obstructionism. But with the naval appropriations bill passed by the House, no excuses which hold water remain.

The District Committee has reported the Sisson bill favorably. Chairman Norton places it first on the list of local measures. All the indications are that it would pass the House by a handome majority. But the Speaker, for undisclosed reasons, is obviously working to avert that vote.

It would be well for Mr. Byrns to realize that repeal of the "red rider" is much more than a matter of local concern. It is an issue of major national significance. If continuation of this Soviet technique of terrorizing teachers is to be tacitly sanctioned by the Federal Congress, it will undoubtedly increasingly find more favor with a number of State legislatures. And the irony is that only by treacherously preventing a vote can the attitude of Congress be made to appear as an indorsement of these Ogpu methods.

Because of its national significance, and because of its threat to every principle of real liberalism, President Roosevelt should promptly interest himself in the very curious story of Speaker Byrns and the Sisson bill. Continued failure to bring the measure to a vote at this session would reflect seriously on the sincerity of many of the Administration's liberal pretensions.

Jove And Jim.

Jove threw a thunderbolt yesterday afternoon and landed it on the very tip of Jim Farley's old headquarters. Not even the gods, apparently, can keep up with the New Deal housing developments, for Jim long ago moved to a new Olympus where, incidentally, he fills a position founded by an earlier American who used to play with lightning on a kite string.

But the intention of the bolt was unmistakable. Any member of the Brain Trust would doubtless be glad to draw upon his knowledge of Greek to explain that a thunderbolt is always a sign of Jovian displeasure with the ways of men. Perhaps, in this case, it's the Tammany-izing of the Civil Service. Perhaps it's the politicizing of the WPA. Perhaps the powers above disapprove the idea of a "dirty" campaign. Of the precise meaning none can be sure. But it's unquestionably an omen of some sort. Yesterday was May 3. Possibly six months hence to a day the full import of the bolt will be made clear.

Controlling Jaywalkers.

If there is any doubt that pedestrians represent a considerable factor in Washington's traffic problem, the figures of the Traffic Bureau indicating that 67 per cent of the persons killed here last year in automobile accidents were walking when struck should put an end to it. Traffic Director Van Duzer's announcement that he proposes to take measures to bring jaywalkers under control in the District is long overdue.

The plan laid before the Commissioners would make pedestrians liable to arrest for crossing streets except at crosswalks. Moreover, they would be required to observe traffic lights and police signals as closely as automobile drivers. Similar regulations have proved successful in other cities. To test them here, a zone of worst congestion has been marked off in which special pedestrian lights will soon be installed. This part of the plan may be heartily indorsed. But indications that thoughtless pedestrians may be subjected to maximum penalties of 10 days in jail or $300 fines arouse serious misgivings.

A $5 fine as a maximum would be far more effective. Courts would have no hesitancy in ordering such punishment. It would be entirely unreasonable to subject jaywalkers, who jeopardize only their own lives, to the same maximum penalties exacted from reckless motorists who become a public menace. Successful law enforcement demands public support. Regulations that could send a man to jail for 10 days simply for crossing a street in the middle of a block would lack public sympathy from the very beginning.

The Vital Relief Problem.

In his New York City address Senator Steiwer showed excellent judgment in centering his discussion about the most vital issue confronting the American people at the present moment—the relief problem. If that could be solved, the chief incentive to extravagant spending would disappear and with it much of the anxiety regarding the unbalanced state of the budget.

As a preliminary to his assault upon the relief program, the Senator from Oregon subjected the President's Jefferson Day speech to a searching analysis in order to show that the Rooseveltian "philosophy" offers no remedy for unemployment. Very wisely he chose to concentrate his fire upon the costly futility of the present relief system instead of over-emphasizing the political corruption incidental to administration of relief. Naturally he does not refrain from mention of "hungry political manipulators working under the direction of Mr. Farley." But the matter of chief importance, as the Senator recognizes, is the need for a thoroughgoing reform that will take the Federal relief system permanently out of politics in a much more effective way than by castigation of individual offenders.

It requires considerable political courage to demand, as Senator Steiwer does, that the WPA be abolished and responsibility for distribution of relief funds be turned back to the States and localities where it properly belongs. This positive program of action is a defense against the frequently made charges that critics of the Administration have no constructive alternatives to offer. The change advocated by Senator Steiwer would immediatley place a check upon that "free and happy" spending which has produced huge, recurrent deficits. And, provided Congress could be kept from authorizing new outlays that would neutralize the effect of such savings, the recommended reform in the relief system would enable the country to make rapid progress toward a balanced budget.

Senator Steiwer concluded with a sarcastic reference to the great disparity between the estimates of the current deficit presented by the Secretary of the Treasury and the President. That difference is largely due to the passage of the bonus bill which the Senator himself sponsored. He can, therefore, make a further constructive contribution to the cause of recovery by pledging support to a program of retrenchment that will prevent a recurrence of the irresponsible practice of voting new outlays without making provision for meeting the costs.

Canada Cuts Her Deficit.

Canada closed her fiscal year March 31 with a deficit of $162,000,000 as compared with an average annual deficit of $138,000,000 for the six years of depression. These totals seem small by contrast with the deficits incurred by the United States during the same period, which have added over $15,000,000,000 to the Federal debt.

Even after making allowance for the great difference in population and wealth of the two countries, Canada's budgetary position compares most favorably with that of the United States. Nevertheless, the minister of finance in presenting his new budget to the House of Commons gave warning that the confidence of investors can not be maintained if the Canadian government continues to spend far more than its income. "We have now reached the stage," he said, "where delay should no longer be tolerated."

Thereupon he proceeded to outline a program of taxation designed to add about $29,000,000 to revenue and make a substantial cut in the deficit for the coming fiscal year. The government proposes to raise the sales tax from 6 to 8 per cent and to increase the corporation income tax rate, thus drawing upon both business and the consumer. However, the additional burden laid upon consumers by higher sales taxation is lightened by the reduced duties on imports from the United States under the reciprocal trade agreement with this country, and by further voluntary cuts in tariffs on automobiles, gasoline, agricultural implements, and various other imports.

The government has shown courage combined with discretion in its initial effort to approach budgetary balance. The Canadian consumer is made to realize that he must participate in the sacrifices needed to reach the goal, and is bluntly told that further delay would be dangerous. Such plain speaking and decisive action set an example to which people on this side of the international boundary cannot remain indifferent.

Haile Selassie is a fatalist, and for years he has believed that whatever is going to happen, will happen. And it has.

"Candidates Are Thick," headlines a Florida newspaper. Aren't they always?

It's only custom that changes. Our grandfathers contracted rheumatism from reading the almanac, and we catch arthritis over the radio.

Scientists say the armadillo hasn't changed a bit in millions of years. Such a pity it is, too, when any change would have been for the better.

Another Symphony.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That was a fine editorial which appeared in your paper of April 30 in regard to the National Symphony Orchestra. As one who feels that the orchestra has been a great asset to the city and who has added his small weight to the effort to keep it here, I much appreciated what you wrote.

Public opinion notwithstanding, a fine symphony orchestra does not spring up overnight, nor is it the fortuitous gathering together of a group of fairly good performers. It demands long, grueling work and actual sweat of the brow to weld individuals into an understanding and cohesive whole, capable of interpreting difficult music according to the ideas of the conductor. And it takes a conductor with vision, imagination, poetic comprehension and musical education to direct that interpretation. More—it takes a conductor with a capacity for hard work and the dynamic force to put his ideas across before a symphony orchestra can become a real musical entity, such as the National Symphony has become, especialy in the last year.

How, then, does a confident stranger drop in on the city proposing to conduct a series of symphony concerts—here where we already have our own symphony orchestra? Is he proposing to bring his whole group of musicians from out of town? The local musicians' union has been objecting strongly to the importation of a mere 14—or, at least, objecting to giving them local rights to perform here. Or is he hoping to recruit his players from the ranks of the already established National Symphony.

He could hardly hope to enlist a duplicate set from the unemployed of Washington. Players of symphony orchestra caliber are not so plentiful in any city. The National Symphony has been forced, simply in order to keep up its high musical standards, to import 14 in a group of 80. It would have been much easier to have hired local musicians for these 14 places could any have been found who measured up to standard.

From where, then, is the material for another symphony to be brought, and what is the idea, anyway?

A Legislator's Obligations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The professional qualifications of a good legislator are probably more numerous today than during any time in history. Due to our complex social and economic life and the inextricable difficulties with which we are confronted, representatives in our State and National assemblies should be men or women well versed in the problems of the day.

But in a large sense there are other qualifications which if not more important are certainly on a parity. Every representative should assume a certain moral responsibility when entering a career devoted to the public service.

If the example be otherwise it is natural that a certain amount of dissension is stimulated and such might lead to bolder steps of social unrest. The unpopular antics of any one member has a tendency to reflect upon the rest and such action should be viewed with a most critical eye. It not only affects the members of Congress but is an insult to the constituency responsible for the election of that certain member.

The Orchestra's Influence.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a subscriber to your paper, a member of the National Symphony Association and dean of the Music Corps of our public schools, I desire to thank you for your enlightening and truthful editorial in The Post of April 30.

As a civic and cultural influence for our community, young and old, Dr. Kindler and his efficient orchestra have played a most vital part. The manner in which hundreds of people have worked for its existence is surely proof of its worth and I trust nothing will occur which will undermine its continuance in our city.

I congratulate you upon your columns, which are fair and practical in outlook.

England In Egypt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The death of King Fuad I of Egypt is the breaking of a link in a chain which may occasion even more serious breaks. The situation in Egypt is critical and no one can say with any certainty what will probably happen as a young king comes to the throne, ruling under regency for two years, since he is but 16 years old. He was being educated in England. This is significant. Persons who think as your recent correspondent, E. F. Reilly, that England can do no good, will see in the young Egyptian king's educational environment the hand of English politics. But with the Italians "civilizing" Ethiopia on a grand scale, even to occupying Lake Tana territory, and the Egyptian student class forcing again the status of Egypt to the 1922 situation which greatly weakened England's influence in Egypt, there is no telling what may happen in northern Africa in the near future.

The people of wealth and greater influence in Egypt have in the main desired to have England friendly to the Egyptians, even to submitting to a mild protectorate. But the desire to be independent in essentials has been a growing sentiment since 1922. How to grant to Egypt practical independence and yet protect the Suez Canal and the Sudan has been England's problem. If England should withdraw her hand from Egypt, just now, there is danger from other sources. Mussolini has of late even gone so far as to twist the British lion's tail, and if Egypt is "open," he may attempt more.

The writer was present in Egypt when King Fuad came to the throne, and has almost yearly visited the land of the Pharaohs since. As he sees the situation, England had done for Egypt what it has done for many other lands—given the country a taste of broad international outlook and an opportunity for high culture. With The Post, I am in entire sympathy, in its editorial on Britain which some, who roll prejudice under their tongues as a sweet morsel, will naturally dislike. It would be a disastrous day if or when Egypt alienates the British and loses their influence.

The Van Nesses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The ceremony of April 23, referred to by William Alexander Miller in The Post of May 1, was in honor of Marcia Burns Van Ness, replacing and marking the site of her temporary home by the Postoffice Department, on which the marker had been placed in 1918 by Marcia Burns Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Marcia Burns married John Peter Van Ness in 1802. She, with her mother and husband, moved from her father's cottage on the site of the Pan-American Building to 1109-11 Pennsylvania avenue, where they resided until 1804, when their two buildings across the way at the southwest corner of D and Tenth streets were completed. One was rented for a store and they resided in the other until 1814, when the Van Ness mansion on the site of the Red Cross Building was completed.

Grateful Washingtonians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of May 1, I saw a letter to the editor, telling him a resolution was adopted at a meeting of the West End Citizens Association thanking The Post for its splendid editorial campaign "to preserve the parks of Washington for the people of Washington."

I am glad that Washington has a "grateful citizenry." It seems that New York City is not so grateful. I quote from a column by O. O. McIntyre: "It was Col. Roosevelt, while Governor, who saved Central Park for posterity and from the real estate marauders. It escaped subdivision and a real estate boom by an eyelash. Yet frequent strollings in Central Park have not revealed a monument to T. R. in the area. A heroic one in bronze should be flung up by a grateful citizenry."

Plan For A Utopian College.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Higher education in the United States has become too much involved with credits, degrees and so-called standards. It is now literally true that the bachelor of arts degree signifies merely the successful completion of 120 to 130 semester hours of miscellaneous study. There are still a few colleges which regard literature, especially the ancient classics and Shakespeare—together with mathematics and a smattering of languages, as the basis of a proper preparation for life. There are hundreds of others that set up three or four groups of courses, centering in literature, the sciences, the social studies, or psychology and philosophy.

To paraphrase the title of a popular song, the students go 'round and round and come out in June with a diploma. Some day there is going to be a revolt against this attempt to measure the unmeasurable. In that day we shall see the disappearance of the B. A. degree, and, it is to be hoped, of all degrees based upon courses and credits. Colleges will provide the materials, such as books, laboratories and lectures, whereby any person who so desires may immerse himself in Greek, chemistry, statistics, music, art, the drama, or psychology. The "diploma" will be a formula developed by the independent student, a picture painted, a play written and presented, or other concrete evidence of personal growth and achievement.

Most of the graduates of even our best colleges, exposed for four years to all the currents of Parnassus, come out indifferent to culture—not because they are incapable of taking fire, but because they are subjected to an environment in which the major values are points, grades, honors, and a set of athletic and social mores which penalizes creative ability and rewards conformity. A free college will set a different and inner stamp upon its members.

Such a school will be possible at first only in a large and cosmopolitan city, where an organizer with vision and a modest endowment of funds will collect a score or more of creative teachers who will not be bound to a routine of report cards, regular lectures, committees and the other diversions of the standard college. Growth will be slow, because there will be no degrees, no "recognition of the value of a diploma from Wumpus University," no campus life, no football teams—only the high stimulus of the opportunity to produce some sign of the divine spark of genius inherent in every man.

The curriculum will be as free as the student, except that no attempt will be made to give any sort of professional or vocational training. There will be two or three auditoriums, a dozen lecture halls, laboratories, statistical apparatus, studios and a playshop, and offices for the small staff and the teachers.

Utopian? Perhaps. But it will strike some members of American college faculties as the sort of Utopia that needs but the touch of genius and a little money to translate into a hopeful experiment.

COLLEGE PROFESSOR.

The Post Impressionist

A Diversity Of Opinion.

Post Office, Monday.

WE'RE late, this year, about getting around to the spring cleaning of our letter box. But here goes for a start, anyhow!

* * *

At the top of that stuffed receptacle, Helen of Troy—whose reality we recently defended until even Ambassador Skinner owned to being converted—meets, if you please, a doughty detractor. She is Mrs. Leila Kestler, prominent inhabitant of the realistic regions about northwest Sixteenth street's thirty-four hundreds.

* * *

Mrs. Kestler:

"If toes are too recklessly exposed, it is impossible to avoid treading on them—the more so when one likes it. Therefore, with your usual forbearance, and to change the figure, I should like to 'make a pass' or 'take a dig' (either or both) at this ghost-girl Helen, who has been tiptoeing through the Post-Impressionist columns. You have given her every opportunity for beguiling your male readers to a renaissance of romance, nor have they refused her invitations.

"I was touched by the young chap who wrote you that he knew a real Helen. The robe of a demi-goddess fades with usage; lucky is the lover who can see, beneath its tatters, the more compensating human virtues!"

* * *

But this kindly reference to the contribution of Milton N. Adams marks the limit of Mrs. Kestler's concessions. Too many of our Hellenic correspondents, she thinks, betrayed evidence of being "men of no uncertain age and supersensitive to the dust of antiquity."

Says she: "Remembering that Dante wandered through Purgatory and Perdition in quest of his Beatrice, this elusive daughter of Zeus might be better dismissed by four words—'to Hell with Helen.' There is a wistfully regretful note in most of your contributors' contributions; it makes me sure that the writers must have passed unseeing those Castles of Enchantment—and their chatelaines—which line the road allegedly leading to Utopia and Idealism, but really leading on to Knowledge and Limitation."

* * *

Meanwhile, and despite all our heroic efforts to prevent it, Lake Murray's waters continue to rise.

We have confessed our convictions that, no matter if our boss couldn't find it on some map or other, the lake does exist, and that it is a noble body of water, full of fish and teeming with racing yachts. We have also publicly vowed that we'd publish no more letters in support of our convictions. Yet, just the same, such letters keep on coming, from Washingtonians in South Carolina, from South Carolinians in Washington, and South Carolinians in their native State—and state.

* * *

Here's "A Native Son" who writes:

"I had thought that Washington's ignorance of Murray resulted from subtlety on the part of my fellow citizens of South Carolina. Isn't the Capital crowded by reel-and-rod men? Were Murray too well publicized here—I argued—these experts might descend upon the lake and soon drain its fish supply.

"But that theory won't stand up. For Charlie Jackson, of the Fisheries Bureau of the Department of Commerce, would soon restock Murray.

* * *

"So," decides this writer, "I am forced to the conclusion that the fault lies in the local libraries. The atlases of Washington must be the kind that still show Alsace as a part of the German Empire."

* * *

* * *

The Column's correspondent who writes under the name (If "name" you may name it) of "Just-1-125,000" asks us to ponder the following haphazard gleaning from more or less recent headlines in the newspapers:

(1) "Home For Girls Is Barbaric"—"Gallinger Hospital Overcrowded"—"Hazen Urges $1,500,000 Tax Increase to Aid Needy." (2) "$100,000 Daily Paid Underworld by Washington Residents on Number-Game." (3) "Americans Take $2,800,000 of Irish Sweepstake Winnings."

* * *

And then, after wondering how many of the American millions sent to the Sweepstake-drawing never came back, this social critic adds: "Americans will gamble! Ireland is wisely philanthropic enough to supervise honestly a lottery for her sick and indigent. Do Americans in general and Washingtonians in particular need any less, for charity, the dimes and dollars now paid to racketeers or sent to the Emerald Isle? How much more could a straight lottery lower Uncle Sam's morale?"

* * *

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

The Derby.

Louisville, Ky.

The Kentcky Derby is a horse race for 3-year-old steeds which is run every spring on the outskirts of Louisville, about ten minutes by cab from the heart of town. It is a private enterprise, conducted for enormous revenue by promoters who subject their customers to bad food, poorly prepared and served at exorbitant prices, bad handling by the staff and generally careless management, except as to the running of the race itself.

The race usually is truly run and a sight worth seeing, but always there are many patrons, including some who have traveled far, who do not get a fair look at the horses because the crowd gets out of control at the crucial moment. By the time the customer who had bought the seat has managed to bend a chair over the skull of the gate-crasher who is jumping up in front of him shouting "Come on!" the race is over until next year.

In the social excitement of the Derby, however, the patrons achieve a forgiving mood. Almost everybody gets tight on the Friday night before the race and again on Saturday night after it. There are dancing and wide-open gambling in rural dives on the Indiana side of the Ohio River. There are house parties in the homes of the local aristocracy and in the country mansions of the Eastern capitalists who run horse farms in the Blue Grass territory around Lexington. The night life around the hotels, crowded to the window sills with trade sucked in from everywhere, is wild and noisy.

Money is loose, the mood of the crowd is festive and tolerant, and nobody would ever suspect that the people who come down in private cars, shooting craps on the floor with thousands of dollars exposed to view, had passed by the wretched cabins of some of the scrawniest and most miserable sidehill dodgers that the American race has produced.

The Kentucky Derby is a great occasion for the study of contrasts. It is a sort of old-home week for the underworld of the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys and Chicago, with many delegates from New York and New Jersey, and a gala occasion for those magnates of industry and masters of men who like to mingle with crowds and talk horse.

Al Capone and his men used to come down from Cicero, Ill., in a body and relax for a few days at the Derby, but Mr. Capone is away now, and the angels have taken many of his boys up to heaven, but others have taken their place. The Derby attracts that kind of men and also the kind of ladies who prowl about the halls of the hotels and barge in at doors where they hear the voices of males to inquire prettily, "Is this Mr. Smith's room? I am looking for Mr. Smith, of Quincy." Usually they aren't looking for Mr. Smith of Quincy at all.

* * * *

After all, the facts of life are what they are. The Kentucky Derby is not all the glamour and the chivalry and beauty that you might be led to suppose from the legends that you have heard. It is a great promotion which puts Louisville in the papers for weeks every spring, leading up to one special week of intensive ballyhoo. It brings thousands of people to town with money to spend on food, liquor, lodging, craps and roulette.

For the respectable people of Louisville it is a happy week in which to meet old friends again and have a little fun, and it is the continuation of an old tradition which ignores reality for the sake of sentiment. It is just one of those old American institutions, like the Mardi Gras in New Orleans or the million-dollar fight anywhere.

Reform it, delouse, so to speak, and you would have no Kentucky Derby, but just another horse race, for the social side of the Derby is just as important to the occasion as the hasty scamper of the little nags on the oval track. Without the monkey business it wouldn't be the Derby, and without the race there would be no monkey business.

The hotels, the merchants and even the gamblers put themselves out to show the customers some fun, and the city of Louisville takes the responsibility for the occasion, extending compliments and little refinements of hospitality to strangers in town. The Governor usually creates a new battalion of Kentucky colonels, and since repeal the famous Louisville distilleries have been holding julep parties for all and sundry.

All this takes the curse off the resentment of the people who are badly served by the horse park management and spattered with potato salad by the waiters in a restaurant which would give Coney Island a bad reputation. And then, of course, it is always a year between Derbies, and the customers forget.

American Expeditions In Russia for Eclipse

Moscow, May 3 (AP).—Two American expeditions will leave Moscow early this week to prepare bases in the Ural Mountains region to study an eclipse of the sun June 19.

A joint Harvard-Massachusetts Institute of Technology expedition headed by Dr. Donal H. Menzel, will observe the phenomenon at Akbulak, near Orenberg. A National Geographic expedition headed by Dr. Paul A. McNally will make its base at Kustanai, 325 miles east of Akbulak. The former is west and the latter east of the Ural Mountains.

The expedition will spend two or three weeks building concrete bases for instruments and making other preparations.

Cuban Soldiers Slain.

Havana, May 3 (AP).—The bodies of two soldiers in the Cuban army, both shot to death, were found today a few miles apart. Army headquarters made no statement on the shootings.

John Bull Looks To His Pigs

British Correspondent Says Britain Has Abdicated.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

MONDAY, April 20, 1936, may be memorized by the schoolboy of the future as the date of the climax of the British Empire, for on that day Britain publicly abdicated her leadership of the European world.

Last September Sir Samuel Hoare electrified the nations at Geneva by his unequivocal statement that the British government realized her responsibilities under the Covenant, and was willing and eager to accept them. The forces of Britain were at last available for the League to enforce justice against Italy for her flagrant violation of the League Covenant. The British fleet had moved into the Mediterranean, and back in England we were for the moment prepared for rapid delivery of judgment against Italy, application of economic sanctions, blockade of the Suez Canal.

If Britain had made a similar declaration of her intentions six months earlier before Mussolini had opened his campaign, there would have been no war for the League to judge later in the year. But according to her traditional procedure Britain refused to commit herself in advance to action in problematical circumstances of crisis, although if she had made a commitment there would have been no crisis. Stupidity, according to the foreigner, the capacity to muddle through according to the Englishman, has been England's God-given gift; but as the Frenchman said, none but the Englishman would have dared to abuse it. Because we were stupid enough not to make our intentions clear at the end of 1934 we had the Italian crisis on our hands in 1935.

Britain Might Have Stopped Italian Plans.

EVEN at the time of Hoare's declaration, determination by Britain to put force behind the justice of his speech would have stopped the Italian war without spreading the conflict to Europe. For his speech compelled the dissatisfied nations to hold their hands; Japanese action in Manchuria slowed up, and Hitler kept a strict impartiality, until the outcome of Geneva's actions should be clear.

But force behind the League was the one thing our Prime Minister and the majority of his government were determined not to apply; and when Mussolini ignored the verbal threats of Geneva, Mr. Baldwin pursued a policy of half-hearted compromise which hoped by backstairs methods to persuade Mussolini to accept peace terms which could be dressed up to look like a League victory. And so long as Italy remained a member of the League and did not openly present it with point-blank refusals, Baldwin, typical John Bull, continued his attempts at compromise.

As the world began to realize that Britain's protests of good faith at Geneva were merely pious platitudes, it recovered from the shock it had received from Hoare's speech. Hitler marched into the Rhineland. As in the Abyssinian crisis, so in the German, Britain tried to get out of the difficulty without assuming any obligations. Rightly we refused to support a French attack on Germany as if Hitler had committed an act of aggression on Mussolini's model, but we refused to make clear to the rest of Europe that in the event of German aggression against any other country we should be found on the side of the League.

Refused the positive assurance that Britain would stand by her specific obligations under the League over the whole of Europe, France was more reluctant than ever to act against Italy. If France could have been assured of British faithfulness to the League in all circumstances, she could have been pursuaded to support it herself against Italy. But that assurance we refused to give.

Eden Upheld League But Withheld Sanctions.

ON April 17 the issue could no longer be hedged; Mussolini's contemptuous refusal to allow the League any say in his peace terms with Abyssinia, his justification of the use of poison gas, left Britain no choice but to decide either to tighten up League action against Italy, or admit defeat. And according to precedent we said one thing, did the other. Eden spoke one of his best pieces in support of League principles, asked plaintively what the world would do if Italy's war went unpunished; and then lamely agreed to postpone consideration of further sanctions until after the French elections. Mussolini won his round.

If the temper of the nations remains as at present, when the Council meets again on May 11, it will prove impossible to maintain even present sanctions. Already Ecuador has found it profitable to call off her economic embargo, and at Geneva no word of condemnation was spoken against her. The odds are that in May we shall have to choose between agreement with Italy or military sanctions. But so much damage has already been done to League prestige that it will be impossible to apply the ultimate sanction, because there is no longer any guarantee that war against Italy, even in her strained position, will not spread to Europe. Therefore, the League will most probably be left to bury itself.

The form of that burial is already clear. Mr. Baldwin is talking of a reorganized League which will not require force against an aggressor, but will use pursuasive powers only. Mr. Bruce, Dominion statesman, now president of the Council, is much of Baldwin's mind, and at the last Council meeting contributed to its undoing by blaming the League Covenant and its mechanisms for the faults of the member nations.

Germany and Japan Cheer British Hesitancy.

REACTIONS to Britain's diplomatic defeat have been swift. Hitler is openly delighted that the League should be destroyed; he would like nothing better than to have meted out to him the same treatment given to Italy. Japanese militarists realize with relief that Britain will never do anything to protect her interests or principles in the Far East. The Little Entente finds Britain no bulwark, sees France using its members merely as protection for her own frontiers, sees that Germany is a likely winner of the next European struggle, wonders whether it might not be wise to take sides right away.

In India indignation against Britains burns in the pages of the responsible Calcutta Statesman, which talks of Eden as a bleating sheep; and the Indian princes particularly are troubled for Britain is the guarantor of their thrones, and if Britain loses command of the sea route to India, those guarantees would be useless. In Baldwin's present mood he will be prepared to give up the Mediterranean almost without complaint. Anything for a quiet life, and the fruit blossoms of his native valley.

Of course, Baldwin will not be in power when England comes to reap the consequences of his actions. Neither the supporters of the League nor the imperialists will take Baldwin's policy lying down, and revolt is imminent. No one is so little a Little Englander as to yield up the Empire without a murmur. Baldwin has so far refused to support the League because he saw quite rightly that once our refusal to state our policy had allowed the Italian campaign to start, nothing but military sanctions, or war, would halt her. But instead of leaving us peace, he gives us the certainty of a nationalist war. His choice was between a League war in support of international justice, and a nationalist war without honour, in defense of nothing. By refusing the first he has left us the second as the heritage of his regime.

Only 'Little England' Role Possible After Equivocation.

Political Nationalism Rife As A Result.

AND, of couse, the British have not yet realized the implications of the position. Economic nationalism has bred political nationalism, and we are no longer capable of seeing European problems through European eyes; as we sit in our comfortable clubs, potter in our gardens, breed our pigs, we wonder why the foreigner cannot live as we do. We shut our eyes to the future, hope the worst won't happen. As Mr. Baldwin barricades his soul behind his Bewdley pig-styes, so we try to barricade England behind an insurmountable barrier of armaments; as if any country in the world has ever found peace behind aggressive arms.

Although a great deal of the personal blame among contemporary politicians must be laid on Mr. Baldwin, it would be grotesquely unfair to make him the Mephistopheles of the act. He represents Britain's emotional reaction to her difficulties.

Britain has not thought out her problems, has found no way to direct her political machinery toward the moral aims she admires. If Mr. Eden had resigned when he first realized that his government was not behind his policies; if he had split the Conservative Party and provoked a general election on the League question; even then it is doubtful if the various left-wing forces which penetrate to the left fringe of the Conservative Party could have joined to support him.

The Labor Party would probably have refused to co-operate unless the other members of the coalition subscribed to their doctrinaire socialist shibboleths; the Liberals would have doubted the wisdom of absorbing themselves with the Labor Party; the Conservatives could have put loyalty to party before devotion to principle. It is conceivable that the left-wing forces of Britain may even now throw out the present government and attempt to enforce a League policy; but it is almost certainly too late.

For want of a clear appreciation of the problems confronting Europe and the Empire; for want of ability to uncover capable politicians willing to lead such a movement, British democracy is going down to defeat. It may be able to preserve a Little England in which to idle out a placid existence, but it is abdicating its power as a world force on the side of social and political justice; its heritage is passing to others.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE CAMERAMAN'S FINISH.

("Indignation over the tactics of certain photographers has reached a high pitch, following the incident of Toscanini's farewell at Carnegie Hall, when a cameraman temporarily blinded the conductor by leaping to the stage and taking another flashlight at close range."—News item).

When the man who snaps the photos
For the press by night and day
With a manner raw and ruthless,
And without an "If I may,"
Shuffles off this mortal coil and Goes to far, far hotter climes,
May his punishment by Satan
Be prescribed to fit his crimes!

II.

Satan will, I think, be waiting
With a glitter in his eye
And a proper plan of treatment
For this most annoying guy;
He will greet him at the portal
With ten billion blinding glares,
He will blast away his eyebrows,
And ignite his startled hairs.

III.

He will have his imps of Hades
Sneak upon this little dear
With explosions most terrific,
Unexpected, front and rear;
They will press a billion buttons
With a pop-pop-pop-pop-pop!
And not pay the least attention
To appeals and pleas to stop.

IV.

They will shoot him with his clothes on,
They will shoot him in the nude,
They will shoot him in his undies
And shout orders rough and rude;
They will snap him when he's sleeping
And they'll snap him when he's not;
When he gets into a bathtub
They will put him on the spot!

V.

They will use the crudest manners,
They'll ignore all rules of taste,
They will hound him all through Hades
With a jeering "Why the haste?"
If he's speaking they will sneak up
For an even closer pose
And explode a dozen flashlights
Two short inches from his nose!

VI.

They will say, "Let's play conductor!
Now come out and take a bow!" . . .
Then they'll touch off high explosives
And they'll shriek and bellow "Pow!"
They will take him when he's praying,
They will snap him in his bed;
They will snap him in a coffin
And remind him that he's dead.

VII.

When he thinks he has escaped 'em
And that privacy is his,
They will swarm from under sofas
And remind him where he is;
They will bellow, "Smile, you sucker!"
They'll command, "Now one more grin!"
They will chase him through the ages
With the order "Once agin!"

VIII.

They will never ask permission
And will never be polite;
They will disregard all ethics
And declare such rudeness right;
They will chase him up the chimney,
They will shoot him 'til it hurts,
And to cries of "Where's your manners?"
All the imps will answer "Nerts!"

IX.

They will dog his every footstep
Taking flashlights by the score;
When he falls from sheer exhaustion
They will taunt him, "Just one more."
Through eternity they'll hunt him,
And to cries of deep distress
He will get this simple answer—
"It's the freedom of the press!"

Delay by Court On Guffey Rule Is Near Record

By the Associated Press.

Unless the Supreme Court passes today on the constitutionality of the Guffey coal act, it will set a new record for the time required to decide New Deal litigation.

The present record was set in the TVA case, which was decided 60 days after arguments. Fifty-three days will have elapsed today since the Guffey case was argued. If the opinion is not forthcoming then, it will be delayed another two weeks by a court adjournment for that period.

Attorneys have predicted ever since the case was filed that considerable time would be required to prepare an opinion satisfactory to a majority of the justices. The dispute is very complex, involving price fixing and regulation of wages and hours of labor in the soft-coal industry.

Nearing the end of the term, the court also will hear today the last arguments to be delivered before next October. The justices will meet May 18 and 25 and June 1 to announce opinions in cases already argued. June 1 has been fixed as the adjournment date for the summer.

Other possible decisions include:

A ruling on the Government's effort to bar Arthur W. Cutten, Chicago trader, from the Nation's grain markets for two years. The court has indicated it would decide against the Government.

Action on a challenge of Pennsylvania's law regulating wholesale beer distribution. The court has indicated it would dismiss the attack, brought by the Premier-Pabst Sales Co. of Delaware.

An opinion on the effort of Chicago commission men buying and selling livestock at the Union Stockyards to collect rates higher than those authorized by Secretary Wallace. A similar case, involving the Kansas City stockyards, was argued last week, but it could hardly be decided tomorrow.

An answer to whether Alabama can tax gasoline sold the Federal Government by the Texas Co. A three-judge Federal District Court enjoined collection of the 6 cents per gallon levy.

The court also will announce whether it will review 18 cases appealed from lower tribunals.

Body of Father Damien Returned to Belgium

Antwerp, Belgium, May 3 (AP).—The body of Father Damien, Belgium's famous "leper apostle," who spent most of his life on the leper island of Molakai, Hawaiian Islands, was returned today to his native soil.

The body of the priest, who became himself a victim of the disease in 1889, was brought to Antwerp by the Belgian schoolship Mercator, after being conveyed from Hawaii to San Francisco by the United States transport ship Republic.

King Leopold himself was at the quay to receive the body, which after impressive ceremonies and religious processionals, will be taken to Louvain for burial. The United States was represented today by Ambassador Dave Hennen Morris.

Kipling's 'If'

By William Lyon Phelps

To George Washington.

One of the most popular of all Kipling's poems is "If," because it expresses the ideal behavior of the ideal person, showing us how to take both encouragement and defeat. It had something of the immediate popularity of Longfellow's "Psalm of Life," beginning "Tell me not, in mournful numbers," and for the same reason. Yet neither "If" nor the psalm is great poetry. They are simply excellent sentiments and splendid moral advice, given in easily swinging verse.

I am glad both were written, because they have brought encouragement, help and stimulation to thousands of persons; they have thus done a great deal of good. I have heard that Longfellow's Psalm has saved many from suicide. But both of these popular pieces could have been written by men who were not poets; whereas Kipling's "Mandalay" and Longfellow's sonnet called "Nature" could have been written only by great poets.

* * * *

But if I had ever known, I had completely forgotten, that "If" refers to George Washington—that Kipling meant it for a description of his character and an appraisal of his temperament. A letter from a friend who modestly signs himself "Unimportant Reader" gives me interesting information.

Kipling told a friend of his how disappointed he was that scarcely any Americans seemed to have heard of his short story called "Brother Squaretoes." Both the story and the poem "If," which immediately followed it, were inspired by George Washington, for whose character Kipling had "an admiration almost amounting to veneration."

* * * *

Well, I immediately turned to the volume "Rewards and Fairies," published by Kipling in 1910, and I read the story "Brother Squaretoes" with new interest. The story is about President George Washington and his refusal to go to war with England when tremendous pressure was brought to bear upon him by Genet, the emissary from France.

Now, in the volume this story is preceded by a rippling Kipling poem on Philadelphia, and is followed by "If."

I wonder how many know that this popular "If" was inspired by Washington. I think everyone will find it interesting to read the Philadelphia poem, the story "Brother Squaretoes" and the "If" verses at one sitting.

CCC Is Ordered to Fill Quota Of 350,000; 30,000 Needed

By the Associated Press.

In a new move to bring the Civilian Conservation Corps back to its authorized strength of 350,000, Robert Fechner, the director, yesterday directed State enrollment officers to disregard previous quotas and accept any qualified boy from a relief family.

At the same time, Fechner authorized enrollments in eight Southern States omitted from the original schedule, while the War Department ordered corps areas commandants to report on the number of recruits needed in each State.

Estimating that between 30,000 and 35,000 new members would be required, Fechner attributed slowness of enrollments to improving business conditions. Not only in the flood area of New England and the Middle Atlantic States, but throughout the country, he said, enrollment officers have reported an unusually large number of private job openings for young men between 18 and 28.

Vacancies also exist for 4,000 war veterans, but Fechner said the reports did not show whether the impending payment of the bonus was one of the reasons.

In addition to the present 22,000 shortage of junior CCC members, Fechner said another 10,000 or more would leave to take private jobs during the next two weeks. The enlistment period, which began on April 15, was extended until May 15 last week.

Yesterday's order was the first making it possible to shift enrollees from one State to camps in others.

The eight States in which enlistments were authorized are Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida, which are in the Fourth Corps Area.

An average of 10,500 members have left each month since last July to accept private jobs, Fechner said. The CCC chief added he expected a still larger number of withdrawals if business men accept his recent invitation to visit the camps and select members for unskilled and semiskilled employment.

Eastman Hails Dismissal Wage Plan for Roads

Labor, Management Agree in Principle on Means to Rail Economies.

A projected agreement between railroad management and labor over methods of providing for employes thrown out of work in consolidations was hailed by Transportation Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman yesterday as "opening up the way" for the realization of operating economies through co-ordination projects.

Eastman has been urging railroads to co-ordinate facilities as a means of cutting costs. His proposals for unifications often have drawn criticism from rail labor, however, which contended they would eliminate employment. It was Eastman's plan of several months ago to compel terminal unifications in 11 cities which brought the thorny problem of employe protection to a showdown.

After conferring intermittently since that time spokesmen for management and labor achieved an agreement last week on the general principles of dismissal wages for displaced employes. Several details remain to be worked out in conferences this week.

Employe Protection.

The conferees were reported reliably to be seeking some way to provide employe protection on railroads which are not parties to the negotiations and to work out technical arrangements under which dismissal wages would be paid.

Rail officials said the general accord on dismissal compensation would provide for either a lump sum payment or partial salary payments over a designated period to displaced workers. The amount of these payments probably would be determined by the number of years a worker had been employed.

Eastman said today that "the effect of a voluntary agreement on the railroad industry generally will be good," adding that "it will open up the way" for co-ordinations.

Continuation Asked.

He said he had not decided definitely as to whether he would proceed with issuance of the terminal unification orders, but indicated these might be delayed until it was seen whether Congress would continue the office of transportation coordinator.

The office is scheduled to expire June 16 and Eastman has recommended that it be continued for at least five years. Thus far, no move to extend it has been made in Congress.

Issuance of the orders originally was postponed at the instance of President Roosevelt, who said that a delay would permit rail management and labor to get together on methods of protecting dismissed workers.

New York, May 3 (AP).—The executive heads of Pennsylvania's hard coal industry were assembling here tonight on the eve of a conclave which was to fortify or reinstruct their spokesmen in negotiations with the United Mine Workers on a new wage contract.

Maj. W. W. Inglis, president of the Glen Alden Coal Co. and chairman of both the operators' conferees and the joint conference on wages, said between 30 and 50 operators would meet tomorrow morning to discuss the situation and hear a report by their negotiators.

Resumption of the stalemated wage parley, fruitless despite dozens of sessions since February 24, was set for 3 p. m. tomorrow (Eastern daylight time). Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady was to sit in as a Federal representative.

Higher Savings Rates Predicted by Bankers

New York, May 3.—Savings bankers are now beginning to predict, with a feeling of more assurance, that interest rates on savings deposits probably have touched or passed their low point, with the next move upward. They also feel that the rate of return on investments may have reached its lowest point, but at any rate that the banks will be able to earn present rates of dividend with lower margins.

Savings banks already have their rate of interest so low that they are feeling the competition of other institutions. Competitors include the postal savings, commercial banks, savings and loan associations with their new Federal charters and various "funds" which have invaded the savings bank field.

Security Board Helps 700,000 From 31 States

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board announced yesterday nearly 700,000 old men and women, orphaned children and needy blind were receiving help from the Federal Government and the 31 States co-operating in the plan.

More than $32,000,000 is to be distributed, the board said, among these classes of indigent people during the three months ending with June.

Included by the board in the total number of persons now being aided were 528,694 needy aged, 18,750 blind, and 142,878 dependent children.

Petitions from six States and the Territory of Hawaii to participate in old-age assistance, from three States for aid to the blind and from eight States for aid to dependent children now are being considered by the board.

The board listed California, Florida, Illinois, Montana, Colorado and New Jersey as having submitted the old-age assistance proposals; Michigan, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Colorado, New Jersey, Connecticut, Delaware and Massachusetts as proposing to join the plan to aid orphans; and Massachusetts, Minnesota and Colorado to help the blind.

Based on the States' estimates, the Federal share of the $32,000,000 for the present quarter will be $14,536,000, of which $11,686,000 will go to the States for assistance to their needy aged, $704,000 for assistance to their needy blind and $1,526,000 to the dependent children.

Under the terms of the social security act, Federal funds are granted to States having public assistance plans which conform with the requirements of the Federal act "so that the States may provide more adequately for their needy dependents."

Guatemala, U.S. Reduce Tariffs In Trade Pact

Mutual Concessions Are Revealed; Treaty 12th of U. S. Program.

By the Associated Press.

Mutual tariff concessions, ranging from outright duty reductions to pledges to maintain present rates, are provided in the reciprocal trade agreement signed by the United States and Guatemala on April 24.

The text of the pact, which was consummated at Guatemala City, was made public yesterday by the State Department.

In return for continuance on the American free list of Guatemalan coffee, bananas, cabinet woods and raw deerskins, the United States was granted tariff reductions up to 50 per cent on certain exports to Guatemala and that country's agreement to "bind" duties on others at their present level.

Cuts in the Guatemalan tariff were made on certain types of tinned and raw fish, dried and powdered milk and cream, fresh, refrigerated and salted meats, cereals, cottonseed oil, varnishes, automobile tires, office furniture, appliances and radios and telegraphic equipment.

The Central American Republic also agreed not to increase prevailing duties on 52 American products, including wheat and wheat flour, fresh canned and dried fruits and vegetables, textiles, upper leathers and leaf tobacco.

In addition, Guatemala obligated itself to eliminate the surcharge on passenger automobiles costing in excess of $1,000.

The United States also agreed to maintain present duties on Guatemalan honey, pineapples, guava pastes and pulps, prepared and preserved guavas and mango pastes and pulps.

American exports to Guatemala in 1935 aggregated $3,883,000 and imports from the country were $6,144,000.

The Guatemalan agreement was the twelfth to be signed by the United States under its reciprocal trade program.

2 Women Treated For Fall Injuries

Two women were injured in falls yesterday.

Mrs. Josephine Hartwig, 52, was treated at Georgetown Hospital for a compound fracture of the leg, suffered when she slipped on a rug and fell in her home at 710 N street northwest.

Mrs. Laura Morris, 60, of 1225 Thirteenth street northwest, suffered a fractured hip when she turned her ankle and fell on a curbstone at Fourteenth and H streets northwest. She was admitted to Emergency Hospital.

Cosmopolitan Clubs To Plan for Session

The Capital District Federation of Cosmopolitan Clubs will hold its annual meeting June 29 at Mayflower hotel, imediately preceding the international convention of Cosmopolitan clubs, which will be in session here June 29 to July 1. The purpose of the meeting of the local clubs will be to formulate plans for the international convention.

A conference was held here last week to make advance preparations. Members of the clubs in the Far West and Canada have signified their intention of attending. A large representation is expected also from both South and East.

Rioters Attack Paris' Legation At Addis Ababa

Open Fire Upon Learning Italian Captives Are in French Custody.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Paris, May 3.—The French Legation at Addis Ababa was attacked by rioting throngs of maddened Ethiopians today.

Hundreds of Italian prisoners of war, entrusted by Emperor Haile Selassie to the custody of the French pending the imminent Italian occupation, roused the lust for blood of thousands of Ethiopians to fever pitch.

M. Bodard, French minister to the deserted Ethiopian court, reported that twice the handful of defenders at his legation repulsed two violent attacks by armed mobs.

Two foreigners were wounded.

Earlier two Armenians under French protection were killed, and several injured in a similar attack.

Bodard reported that pillagers burned the French railway warehouses in Addis Ababa, with losses totaling millions of francs.

Appeals to Mussolini.

Acting immediately upon receipt of Bodard's messages, French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin appealed personally to Il Duce. Mussolini informed the Paris, London and other governments that Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Italian commander in chief in East Africa, has been ordered to hasten his entry into Addis Ababa to assure the safety of foreigners.

He said the French Legation compound in the terror-stricken city was giving refuge to 1,200 French, Czechoslovakian and Spanish refugees, in addition to the Italian prisoners of war. Mobs, Bodard wirelessed, were determined to demolish the capital before the Italians arrived.

Delayed messages from Bodard reported that he visited the Emperor before the imperial family fled to Djibouti. The Negus asked that France insure his security upon arrival at the French port. Bodard pledged that such security would be given.

Asked Not to Fight.

Subsequently, the Diplomatic Corps in Addis Ababa asked the Emperor not to attempt the defense of his capital so as to avoid a battle which would risk the lives of foreigners.

Prior to his departure the Emperor turned hundreds of Italian prisoners of war over to Bodard's custody. He asked them to deliver the prisoners to Badoglio.

In his messages to Paris Bodard appealed for news of Badoglio's whereabouts. He reported soldiers and bandits opened fire on his legation as soon as they learned Italian prisoners were in Bodard's custody.

Bodard reported that pillagers sacked the Imperial Palace after the guard had mowed down many with machine-gun fire. Others burned the downtown section of the capital.

The young Ethiopian political party sent a warning to Bodard that he might expect further attacks on the French Legation tonight.

When bullets started falling inside the French compound yesterday Bodard ordered a state of siege. He armed the refugees under his protection and stationed them to hold the walls of the compound at all cost.

Women and children were placed in deep caves for safety. The caves were dug months ago for just such an emergency as now prevails.

Several French railroad officials were cut off from the legation compound and took refuge in the railway station. They were surrounded by mobs trying to burn the depot.

Late this afternoon Bodard reported that the pillaging and burning in Addis Ababa had continued all day.

"The Ethiopians are anxious that the Italians find only a destroyed city," he said.

Legation patrols succeeded in leaving their compound this afternoon. They rounded up 300 more Europeans, of whom three were French. There are now 1,500 persons seeking safety at the French Legation.

Barbed wire barricades were strung around the compound tonight.

The legation gardens were cleared so that tomorrow an airplane, bringing fresh supplies of ammunition, can land if necessary.

Bodard reported that the refugees at his legation have ample supplies of provisions, including food, clothing and water. Volunteers are cooking in the open air.

Flandin sent Bodard telegrams urging courage. Bodard said they were read to refugees, who cheered.

"There is still no news of the approaching Italians," he said.

Newspapers were devoted almost entirely to activities in East Africa.

It was announced tonight that the Chamber of Deputies will meet at 4 p. m. tomorrow and that the meeting will be broadcast all over the nation, indicating that Mussolini may make an important speech.

Previously, Il Duce addressed a farmers' meeting at Palazza Venezia for ten minutes.

"You see," he said, "the situation has presently changed. There is complete chaos in Addis Ababa and urgent need for Italian command to establish order and foreign nations wants us to hurry occupation of Addis Ababa.

Order to Enter City Expected Momentarily

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

With the Italian advance on Addis Ababa, transmitted via field wireless at Debra Sina, May 3.—Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of Italy's East African armies, tonight was following closely behind the native Askari troops which have occupied the Entoto Hills overlooking Addis Ababa.

Marshal Badoglio is in constant contact with the vanguard of Italian troops and is personally directing the advance on Addis Ababa. He was expected momentarily to give the order to enter the capital.

Mission Group Told of Death Of African Aid

Takoma Park Adventists Learn of Slaying of Mrs. Stadin in Ethiopia.

Through the State Department, general conference headquarters of the Seventh-Day Adventists at Takoma Park yesterday were informed of the death of Mrs. A. R. Stadin, wife of Dr. A. R. Stadin, of the Adventist Mission in Addis Ababa. Mrs. Stadin, according to the message which was radioed from the American minister at the Ethiopian capital, was killed by a stray bullet during rioting early yesterday.

Mrs. Stadin and her husband were believed by conference officials to have visited headquarters here on their way to their Ethiopian station a year ago last January. Mrs. Stadin was Scandinavian by birth, but both she and her husband became naturalized Americans while Dr. Stadin was studying at the College of Medical Evangelism at Loma Linda, Calif.

Mrs. Stadin was a graduate nurse of Skodsborg Sanitarium, Denmark. She also served as a nurse at Loma Linda.

Assigned to duty at the Mission Hospital at Dessye, Ethiopia, which was bombed a few weeks ago, the Stadins sailed from the United States January 20, 1935. They visited relatives in Norway and Denmark before journeying to Africa.

The message which the Naval Communications station at Arlington received from Minister Cornelius van H. Engert, who has charge of the American Legation at Addis Ababa, read:

"Deeply regret to report the death of Mrs. Stadin, wife of Dr. A. R. Stadin, of the Seventh-Day Adventist Mission, who was killed this morning at 5:15 o'clock by a stray bullet which pierced her skull.

"Dr. C. C. Bergman (a member of the same mission) will endeavor to embalm the body until burial is possible.

High-Grade Bonds Maintain Stability

New York, May 3.—The relative stability of high grade bonds in the recent sagging markets is encouraging to corporations that were in the midst of refunding plans when the interruption came. Representative municipal bond prices declined only enough in April to raise the yield one-tenth of 1 per cent and that was approximately the measure of change in gilt-edged rail and utility bonds.

imminent arrival of the conquering Italian armies.

Foreign correspondents who had barricaded themselves in their own compound near the government radio station were forced to abandon it under fire shortly before dawn. (Presumably they went to legations, where thousands of foreigners are quartered.)

During the night the correspondents were constantly subjected to attacks of shiftas—or wild bandits.

The entire retail center of the city was demolished. The postoffice, tobaco regio (National Tobacco building—a large structure), triumphal arches and the customs house were but smoldering remains. Munitions stores exploded.

The government "gold house," where treasury funds were held, was the scene of a desperate fight as a mob stormed the posts, defended by machine guns. Swarming over the corpses of their comrades, some of whose hands were chopped off in the fighting, the rioters finally succeeded in capturing the gold stores.

Natives attacked Dr. T. A. Lambie, American field director of the Ethiopian Mission Service, at the mission headquarters, but the staff beat off the assailants, killing one and wounding one.

Mrs. Cornelius Van H. Engert, wife of the American Minister, and United States Chief Radio Operator Tanner had narrow escapes from stray bullets.

At dawn the British Legation reported it sighted dust on a distant hilltop which might be the advance guard of the Italian army.

Rains, however, might delay the occupation of the capital.

Foreigners were picked up by legation lorries under cover of darkness in the early hours of the morning and carried to comparative safety.

Reported Killed.

In Paris, the Havas (French) News Agency reported by wireless from the French Legation that 21 foreigners were killed in Addis Ababa by rioting Ethiopian warriors, most of them Armenian or Greek merchants attempting to defend their stores.

Several Europeans isolated in the streets when the trouble broke out yesterday had narrow escapes. They were rescued by repeated dashes by British subjects from the legation and were brought in to safety in cars and lorries.

Thrilling tales were told by refugees, many of whom lost their houses and shops through pillage and fire.

When the Emperor left for Djibouti he ordered the Imperial Palace to be thrown open to the people and that they be allowed to help themselves. Streams of men, women and children were seen running from all directions to the palace. They returned laden with clothing, beds, carpets and furniture.

The ammunition dump also was thrown open. Thousands of men carried off cases full of ammunition, which was tried out. Shots fired into the air made it sound as if a terrific battle were in progress.

When townspeople realized the Emperor with his ministers had gone they began looting shops. Laughing men and women were seen wearing top hats and European clothing over their ordinary clothes.

Later, when much liquor was consumed, fierce wrangling over the loot started. Swords were drawn and shots fired.

Official quarters said after a day of indecision that the Emperor, who was strongly pressed by the Empress, decided at midnight Friday that the only course left open to him, owing to what he called the failure of League support and the overwhelming superiority of Italian armament, was to leave the country.

The city was still at the mercy tonight of drunken looting mobs, which wounded Dr. Melly of the British ambulance service. He was shot in the lung by an Ethiopian looter and his condition was serious.

Churches Are Burned.

The Abuna Cyril, head of the Ethiopian Church, took refuge in the British Legation when mobs looted and burned several of his churches and also looted the British church.

The center of the city presented a picture of utter desolation. Most buildings were burned after they were looted, including the postoffice.

The only means of communication with the outside world was through legation wireless, as the commercial station had ceased to function.

Agitators continued to urge total destruction of the city before the Italians arrive.

Dr. Melly was shot when his car stopped to pick up a wounded Ethiopian. A drunken leader of a group of bandits thrust a revolver into the automobile and fired. The physician was removed to the home of the British Minister.

The looters usually only attacked foreigners and others when efforts were made to halt them from pillaging. Most of the dead lying in the streets were Ethiopians who were killed while trying to loot defended stores and buildings. The center of town was a shambles.

The few Europeans left outside legations passed hours of terror barricaded inside their houses, fearful of attacks.

"Among us we have nine rifles, two shotguns and ten revolvers with a fair amount of ammunition. I feel very strongly, and my companions agree with me, that we should not abandon the legation and radio stations without determined effort to hold them, as they would certainly be pillaged and burnt after our departure.

"Should the situation become much worse, which I do not anticipate, the department may depend on my withdrawing before it is too late. The British have left us a truck for that purpose.

"Several fresh fires have started in town but the legation is not threatened by them. Shooting has been less intense during last hour or so.

Selassie, Wife Safe on Board British Vessel

By the Associated Press.

Djibouti, French Somaliland, May 3.—Emperor Haile Selassie and his imperial family reached the sanctuary of French soil and a British destroyer today after a precipitate two-night flight from the capital of his crumbling empire.

The little "King of Kings," now another exile, his family and several ministers boarded the vessel, the Diana, which sailed for Aden, Arabia, en route to England.

Refusing to make a declaration as to his intentions, the Emperor—appearing very thin and tired—asked the French governor to bar newspapermen from the railroad station.

An Italian, who attempted to photograph the Negus, was prevented from doing so by Ethiopians and several blows were exchanged. The incident took place in front of the Ethiopian consulate.

Several Italian newspapermen and secretaries of the Italian Legation silently watched the little one-time ruler leave the train. He was bareheaded and wore white clothing with a light brown cape.

Ministers in Party.

Several ministers and a number of other officials accompanied the Negus.

The train arrived 35 minutes late. It was composed of special cars, including a sleeping car and a club car.

Among officials to greet the imperial family were the French civil and imperial governors and their staff officers in dress uniforms.

The Empress Mennen was the first to get off the train, followed by Haile Selassie and Crown Prince Asfa Wosan, but neither Prince Makonnen nor the little princesses were seen. The Empress was heavily veiled and appeared to be overcome by emotion.

Guard of Honor.

The small crowd at the station was ascribed to the heat, which kept most of the population indoors. A company of Senegalese troops formed a guard of honor, presenting arms as the defeated Emperor walked between two columns.

After leaving the railroad station the imperial family rode to the governor's palace in automobiles supplied by the government. There they were also saluted by troops. A double line of Senegalese sharpshooters was drawn up outside the entrance.

By then a large crowd had assembled outside the governor's palace and many natives openly wept when Haile Selassie appeared. Others cheered.

Accompanying the Emperor were Ras Kassa, Ras Desta, Foreign Minister Herrouy and Dedjazmatch Emerou and 30 high court dignitaries. The British destroyer arrived this morning from Aden.

Telegrams Refused.

Reports here said that rioting and fires continued in Addis Ababa and that the radio station was destroyed by Ethiopians. Telegrams to the capital which the Emperor deserted were refused by the Djibouti postoffice.

The imperial family was served luncheon at the governor's palace in strict seclusion and only the highest French officials were admitted to the dining room.

French officials said the family would transfer from the destroyer to a liner at Aden and go on to England.

main there as settlers, Premier Mussolini indicated today in a speech to rural peasants.

Il Duce was in the greatest good humor and prefaced his speech by eating a raw bean from a stack of agricultural products on a table before him in the royal hall.

After praising the land, he declared: "At least 400,000 of the 500,000 men in the center of Africa are peasants who, while marching and fighting, do not forget the land. They boast about it, take some area, contrast it with Italy, and they foresee the possibility of carrying to those depopulated lands our valorous and fecund families of the Italian race."

Premier Mussolini was dressed in the green uniform of a corporal of the Fascist militia. He paid high tribute to peasants fighting in Africa, saying, "They have never protested when rations were late or when it was necessary to give out water drop by drop at a temperature of 50 degrees centigrade (122 degrees Fahrenheit). Only the Italian race and none other could have supported this."

Il Duce told the farmers, "You are fortunate to receive your prizes on this great day in the history of the nation. You see crowned the efforts of the Italian people, to whom goes the glory which they have merited through sacrifices of blood."

Speedy Peace, Puppet Throne In Africa Near

Lifting of Sanctions Gives League Problem; Paris to Seek Parley.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, May 3.—Members of the League of Nations generally anticipated tonight that Premier Mussolini would put a puppet emperor upon the throne of Ethiopia and quickly make a peace treaty upon his own terms.

An Italian spokesman emphasized that Italy always recognized the existence of Ethiopia. From this it was deduced that Il Duce will continue to recognize an independent Amharic state, though probably under Italian supervision with the remainder of the country passing to Italy in the form of a colony or mandate.

If Mussolini signs a peace treaty with a new emperor some diplomats here believe it would be difficult for the League to ignore such a treaty. From this standpoint the League's task would be simplified, they said.

On the other hand, it would be difficult for the League to give its benediction to an arrangement achieved by what the League officially called a war of aggression.

Removal of Sanctions.

Another delicate problem is when and how existing sanctions will be lifted. Some observers predicted a move to lift sanctions at the regular session of the League Council May 11.

League members realize these sanctions, which are disturbing the economic life of Europe as well as that of Italy, cannot continue indefinitely.

The moral of what League officials called the "Ethiopian tragedy" from Geneva's standpoint was said to be that it involves a big blow to the League, and the body has learned that economic and financial sanctions are futile in halting a war.

Only quick, concerted military action, these sources said, would avail in a similar case, and League states must soon answer the question of whether they are willing to go that far.

British, French Confer on Selassie

London, May 3 (AP).—The British and French governments consulted today over the future of Emperor Haile Selassie as the fleeing Ethiopian monarch reached Djibouti.

Consultations are proceeding through diplomatic channels, but there was no information available in official quarters as to what the emperor's future will be.

The British government has received no information that the emperor had abdicated, but it was understood he had turned over the government to ministers. Where these ministers are was unknown, but several of the leading ones were reported also to have left the country.

If abdication consists of ceasing to be an effective head of government, British officials said, Haile Selassie would be considered to have abdicated.

Britain's future policy in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict, informed circles said, will be formed after taking stock of the new developments.

The cabinet, which already had been called into special session tomorrow to consider the final draft of a questionnaire to be submitted to Germany, will be able to review week-end developments in Addis Ababa.

France to Seek Tri-Power Parley

Paris, May 3 (AP).—A three-power conference between Great Britain, France and Italy to fix new zones of influence for them in Ethiopia now that an Italian conquest is accepted as certain was suggested to-night in French quarters close to the foreign office.

These sources said League of Nations governments probably would refuse to recognize any new government which Italy might set up in Ethiopia. It was pointed out that this might prove a serious handicap to Italy in attempting to obtain capital to develop the country, thus sharply cutting down the value of the conquest.

It was said in diplomatic circles that Great Britain must accept Premier Mussolini's victory or fight Italy, which she is unwilling to do.

Help the POLICE DEPT. Cut Down Juvenile Delinquency

Maj. Brown, Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police

APPEALS

To All Business Men

When I started the first Boys' Club in Precinct No. 5 about two years ago, I had a theory that it would cut down juvenile delinquency by keeping the boys off the streets and teaching them to respect the men on the force instead of fearing them. Now I have facts and figures to prove that my theory has actually worked out in practice. Facts that prove a decrease in juvenile cases of 74% in the original district where the first boys' club was started, and enough improvement in newer districts to warrant a drive to extend this work to other parts of Washington, and to provide better facilities for the established clubs.

WILL YOU HELP?

I'm asking every businessman to help me in this work by contributing toward its cost.

Perhaps you'll be asked by a fellow businessman—a number are helping me—but if not, please send yours direct to our temporary office today.

Poland's National Holiday Marked at Embassy Here

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Rain made the going difficult but kept no one away yesterday from the reception at which the Charge d'Affaires ad Interim of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska entertained at the embassy from 4 to 7 o'clock. The occasion was in celebration of the national holiday of Poland and brought together all of diplomatic and official society. It was one of a series of such occasions in celebration of days of national significance which have been observed at the various embassies this spring.

The Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Sokolowska received in one of the salons at the head of the stairway. Mme. Sokolowska wore a gown of printed chiffon in blue and white, simply made with a high neckline and cape sleeves. Among the guests was her neice, Miss Rita Flaherty, of New York City, who has been here since Tuesday and is returning home today. Miss Flaherty wore a suit of gray with a large violet-colored hat of straw, a blouse of the same shade and a bunch of violets on her lapel.

Despite the rain, nearly all of the women guests wore light spring dresses, many of them printed silks or chiffons which suited the setting created by the bouquets of pink gladioli and weigela, the marble basin of fern at the foot of the mirror in one of the rooms, and the low bowl of iris, sweet peas and other spring flowers which decorated the tables in the two rooms where the guests were served.

Paneled With Mirrors.

In the dining room the walls on two sides were paneled with mirrors. On the marble ledge at the base of each mirror was a high crystal vase with a large bouquet of the pink flowering shrub. In the second room where the guests gathered for refreshments, in an opposite wing of the embassy were two striking paintings, both the work of the great Polish artist, Wojciech Kossak. At the far end of the room was a picture of Gen. Pilsudski on horseback with his troops in the background, and on the wall opposite, beside the entrance, a painting of like size, of Gen. Pershing on his horse, accompanied by another officer.

The picture of Gen. Pershing was done in 1921 and that of Gen. Pilsudski, later. There is another portrait of Gen. Pershing by the same artist, done shortly before this as a gift to West Point. Kossak represents the third generation of his family which have been famous Polish artists. A picture by his father, "The Kidnaping of Prince Radziwill," and one by his grandfather, hang in the next room.

Although the guests were somewhat concentrated in the two dining rooms, some sat in small groups in the other rooms, giving an atmosphere of pleasant informality to the occasion.

Many Are Present.

Among these who were there during the latter part of the afternoon were the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky, the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson; the Minister of Albania, Mr. Faik Konitza; the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka and their daughter, Mlle. Nella Veverka; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, the Minister of Norway and Mme. de Morgenstierne, the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos; the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Mme. Jose T. Baron.

Also the Governor of the Federal Reserve and Mrs. Mariner Eccles, Mr. Robert Kelly, chief of the Eastern European Division of the State Department and the Assistant Chief of the Eastern European Division and Mrs. Earl Packer, with whom was Mrs. Packer's brother, Mr. Louis Malone, well-known Washington pianist; Dr. and Mrs. Walter Bloedorn, Mr. and Mrs. John McClure, Mr. Candreth Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle, Mme. Elena de Sayn, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Clark and Mrs. Harry Baxter.

Mrs. Leon Cochran, whose husband was connected with the American Embassy in Warsaw several years ago, was there with her two young daughters, the Misses Dorothy and Molly, both in costumes of the Krakow district in Poland. The costumes were brought back by Mrs. Cochran and Molly last summer when they returned from a visit in Poland, abbard the S. S. Pilsudski on her maiden voyage. Miss Dorothy Cochran, the older of the two girls, was born in Warsaw and Molly in Rumania. Their little brother is the only one of the family born in this country. Mrs. Cochran is a native of Poland.

Public Invited To See Gardens At Georgetown

Visitation Convent, Founded in 1799, to Be Viewed for the First Time.

Georgetown, interesting and historic section of our Nation's Capital, is preparing to open its gates to the public for the eighth consecutive season, the dates this year being May 9 and May 16. The backward spring followed by a rush of warm weather has brought tulips, iris and wistaria in full flower at once. Some of the gardens also may have roses on the second Saturday, May 16.

On May 9 there wil be open the gardens of Mrs. Thomas Bradley 1601 28th street; "Dumbarton Oaks," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, 1301 R street; Mrs. Fulton Lewis, 1669 31st street; Mrs. John Sevier, 3124 Q street; Mrs. Anne Archbold, 3904 Reservoir road; Mr. Bernard Lane, 5327 Conduit road; Mrs. William McCain, 3337 N street. Tea will be served that afternoon on the terrace at "Dumbarton Oaks" with Mrs. Hugh Nicolson and Mrs. Llewellyn Nicolson presiding.

On May 16 the list will include the gardens of the Georgetown Visitation Convent at 35th and P streets, where tea will be served on the lawn outside the new gymnasium; Mrs. Gordon Dunthorne, 3304 N street; Mrs. Henry Leonard, 3038 N street; Mrs. Lincoln Green, 3025 N street; Mrs. Walter Peter, 3027 N street; Mrs. Ruth Hanna Sims, 1224 30th street; Miss Bertha Looker and Miss Florence Hedges, 1312 30th street; Mrs. Herman Hollerith, 1633 29th street; Mrs. John Ihlder, 2811 P street; Miss Cecil Jones, 2906 P street; Miss Lucy Bentley, 2918 P street, and Miss Katharine Dougal, 3030 P street.

The Georgetown Convent is considered the "feature" of the second afternoon's showing as it is the oldest Visitation Convent in America. Founded in 1799, it has always occupied the same site and has never before been opened to the public.

The gates will open at 2 and close at 7. Mrs. R. F. Whitehead, 1524 28th street, is chairman of the tour and has information regarding it available to those interested.

Russian Society Of World War Will Give Ball

Room for Wednesday Fete Will be Reminiscent of Pre-War Moscow.

The Washington Post of the Russian Veterans Society of the World War will entertain at its annual spring ball on Wednesday evening at the Shoreham Hotel, when scenes reminiscent of Moscow's pre-war splendor will be re-enacted. The proceeds of the ball will go toward the relief of disabled veterans in the Capital, who served with the Russian forces in the World War and who are receiving no compensation, pension or retirement fund from either the Russian or American governments.

Such distinguished medals as the Legion of Honor of France, the Victoria Cross of Great Britain, the Crown of Rumania and the Crown of St. George of Russia have been bestowed on many of the veterans of the Washington Post, who are American citizens. Most of the members of this group were cited for gallantry in service on the Eastern Front, at a time when the harrassment of German forces in this area was of utmost importance to the allied cause.

Basil P. Toutorsky, noted Russian-American composer and concert pianist, is chairman of the ball committee. While serving as an officer of the allied Russian Navy during the World War, Mr. Toutorsky narrowly escaped with his life when the flagship Empress Maria, to which he was assigned, was blown up in the Black Sea on October 7, 1916. Later, Mr. Toutorsky, who is a member of the Military Order of the World War, served as flag lieutenant on the staff of the commander-in-chief of the Black Sea fleet.

Among outstanding members of the Russian colony, who are supporting the ball, are Lieut. Gen. Alexis M. Uzefovich, commander of the post, who took part in the Battle of Galicia in 1914; Col. Leslie, who wears 29 decorations and has fought in 62 major battles; Col. A. Krinitsky, Capt. M. N. Egoroff, Capt. R. R. Ramme and Lieut. A. J. Smirnoff.

The program will include dancing, a buffet supper and a floor show, featuring Russian ballet dancers. The program will begin at 9 p. m.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Mrs. Henry R. Rea, of Pittsburgh and Palm Beach, arrive in Washington Friday to see that all is in order for the coming of age of her pet project, the Gray Ladies Corps of Walter Reed Hospital, which will celebrate its eighteenth birthday, May 23.

Mrs. Rea will return from her spacious home at Sewickley, near Pittsburgh, for the anniversary ceremonies. For, even as General Pershing, she never misses a Gray Ladies celebration.

As field director of the Red Cross at Walter Reed Hospital in World War days, Mrs. Rea gave many hours of inspired service to this work. In this she had able assistants in her daughter, then Miss Anne Rea, and Miss Margaret Lower, now the field director of the Red Cross at Walter Reed. It was the wounded veterans who first called the Red Cross workers "the Gray Ladies" from the uniforms they wore. Before that Red Cross workers had been called "Blue Birds," by the men and the nurses in their white uniforms were known as "Angels."

Many of the original Gray Ladies who gathered around Mrs. Rea in those now far off World War days are still Gray Ladies and carrying on at the Walter Reed Hospital. These include Mrs. Charles Warren, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Reeves Lewis, Mrs. Hugh C. Wallace, Mrs. William Lewis, and her sister, Mrs. Richard Fouchey.

One of the indefatigable workers who has never lost interest since first she donned the Gray Ladies' vell is Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the Senator from Pennsylvania. It would not be proper to mention the work of official ladies at Walter Reed without a mention of Mrs. Franklin K. Lane, wife of the Secretary of the Interior in Wilson's Administration. Mrs. Lane now lives in the west, but she often recalls old days at Walter Reed, when she was in charge of the post war diet kitchen in the Red Cross house and directed the making of many delicacies for the veterans.

As attractive as when she was a debutante and Miss Ruth H. Pilling, daughter of Mrs. James C. Pilling, Mrs. Carroll Dunham 3d, of New York, is renewing old friendships in Washington on a visit to her mother.

As Miss Pilling, Mrs. Dunham was a favorite debutante of her coming-out year and a member of its exclusive coterie of belles. Mrs. Dunham, who has not visited Washington for some time, has been the guest of honor at many parties given by her friends of debutante days.

How much members of the Washington family resemble each other was emphasized at a recent luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel when Miss Ann Washington, daughter of the late Lawrence Washington, one of the children of the last Washington to live at Mount Vernon, John Augustine Washington, jr., was the guest of Mrs. Paul Healy, of Paris, in Washington for a week or so. It is safe to venture that one of the topics of their conversation was concerned with happenings at the Colonial Exposition in Paris several years ago when Miss Washington was hostess at the replica of Mount Vernon, one of the outstanding features of the exposition.

It was a rendezvous for Americans and Europeans alike, anxious to pay homage to the memory of George Washington by greeting his relative on French soil.

The GENTLER SEX . . .

By Malvina Lindsay.

Office Interlude.

Miss Bubble—Where's Mr. Flint?

Miss Grubb—He said he had to go see a man——

Miss Flytie—Well, I certainly hope his wife doesn't call while he's out. The last time she wouldn't believe me. Honestly, if I had a wife who nagged——

Miss Snipp—They love 'em to nag. That's the kind they always marry——

Mrs. Wigglebaum—That's just where you're all wrong. A man marries a woman for only one thing—IT. I tell you if you've got IT you can always get married.

Miss Snipp—Oh, as far as that's concerned ANYBODY can get married—if they're not too particular——

Miss Trotter—It's not getting married, it's staying married——

Miss Bubble—Well, I just wouldn't marry ANYBODY——

Miss Grubb—Sh . . h . h! Please girls get to work. Mr. Flint'll be back any minute.

• • • •

Miss Trotter—Say, did you see where a man said there's to be another war——

Miss Snipp—Well, all I can say is the United States ought to stay home and mind its own business——

Miss Flytie—Yes, men are scarce enough as it is.

Mrs. Wigglebaum—Men aren't so scarce if you know how to get 'em——

Miss Snipp—Well, I'd certainly do without a man all my life before I'd run after one.

Miss Noodle—Well, this is what I always say—if the right one comes along, then all right. But if he doesn't, then you're a thousand times better off——

Mrs. Wigglebaum—That's where you're all wrong. There's something the matter with a woman who's never got married. She's never really LIVED——

Miss Bubble—Well, just the same I wouldn't marry ANYBODY——

Miss Grubb—Girls, PLEASE let's get to work.

• • • •

Miss Flytie—I'm simply dying for a divided skirt. Fred hates 'em though——

Miss Snipp—Well, I'd certainly not let any man dictate to me what I wore——

Miss Bubble—Well you can't get dates unless you have cute clothes——

Mrs. Wigglebaus—Well I've been married twice and I never had much to spend on my back. I tell you if you're the type men like——

Miss Noodle—Well, if a man didn't have sense enough to appreciate me for myself—

Miss Grubb—Sh . . . h! Here comes Mr. Flint . . . Oh, no, it's the janitor. Well anyway we'd all better get busy.

• • • •

Miss Bubble — Ibet a quarter today on Landon.

Miss Noodle—I think Borah'll be nominated.

Miss Flytie — What this country needs is somebody to reduce taxes——

Miss Snipp — What this country needs is a woman President. The women don't get a fair deal——

Mrs. Wigglebaum — The women can always get what they want if they know how to manage men.

Miss Nodle—Well, I don't think that's a very honorable way——

Miss Trotter—It never pays to argue with 'em. Never argue and never pay is my motto.

Miss Snipp—Well, I've certainly always paid my own way——

Mrs. Wigglebaum—That's nothing to brag about. See where it's got you.

Miss Noodle—Well this is what I always say about men——

Life After 40 Is Book of Tips To All Women

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"A WOMAN who will tell her age, will tell anything," according to a wag who gloried in commenting on feminine foibles. Yet neither woman's proverbal tendency to misrepresent her birthdate, nor her continuous attempt to retain her fleeting youth provides an escape for the inevitability of old age.

Perhaps the older woman whose face bears the fewest marks of the years is the one who realizes the last half of life has a good many points in its favor; that the first 40 years may be but the planting and growing season for the rich harvest of creative activity, worthy contributions to human welfare, deepening friendships and widening sympathies that should make up any person's life.

A recent book, "Women After 40," gives some pertinent pointers along this line. Admitting at the outset, "The fact is we grow older—even the youngest of us," the author, Grace Loucks Elliott, proceeds to give some suggestions on how to make the most of the years after middle age begins.

Be Active, First Hint.

Some of her hints follow:

1. Be active. Don't allow yourself to become a spectator of the achievements of others.

2. Increase your physical vitality through recreational activities—gym lessons, tap dancing and swimming. Regular exercise is a definite asset to health, as important in later, as in earlier, life. After 40, a woman's richness of experience can continue to keep pace with the amount of energy she has available.

3. Play an important part in public life—municipal committees, movements, causes and club welfare projects. Older women, wise through the experience of having lived longer, have a more worthy contribution to make to work of this type than younger persons.

4. Develop latent cultural interests. Study all subjects you have wanted to study during the busy years of child-bearing and child-rearing. If you have always wanted to paint, or write or play the piano, give yourself an opportunity to do so.

5. Seek endeavor that provides for a widening of interests and sympathies. Age offers the chance for the enjoyment of interests that preserve not only for the individual, but for the race, its cultural values.

Author Describes Crises.

The author describes each crisis confronting the average woman in middle age, stressing the fact that between the ages of 35 and 40 most women "have the urge to do something different." The manner in which they have responded to that urge (which is merely a signpost of age) indicates whether the latter half of their lives will be devoted to worthy, satisfying activity or be spent in meaningless futility.

Ecru Linen Lace Gown for an Elegant Lady

Dull Fabrics Choice For Deshabilles

Paris—Lingerie and deshabilles are more popular than ever in dull fabrics, such as mossy crepes and delicate rayon sheers. Favorite colors are periwinkle and turquoise blue, pale pink and salmon. Tones of maize, champagne and canary yellow are seen also as well as delicate tones of mauve, which are especially requested by discriminating women to wear with dresses in the new shades of purple, Bishop, or Parma violet.

Lace, Perennial Favorite, Combines Glamour, Simplicity and Youthfulness

A PERENNIAL favorite is lace. Each season finds it playing both major and minor roles always with a degree of glamour. Whether it serves for collars and cuffs, or whether it's the whole dress itself, lace has a host of admirers.

For the hot summer, when most fabrics wilt like sun-beaten flowers, stiff, starchy linen lace always looks cool and crisp. Dresses of it stand the strain of warm weather wear better than almost any others.

Designers have long favored lace for frilly gowns. This season, however, they have taken this essentially feminine material and are making it up in tailored styles. Such dresses are suited to almost any type, from the sophisticated siren to the sweet and girlish maid.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Chapter 28.

"I'M GOING to be sorry when you leave here," Mrs. Bond told Ruth jokingly, "You scrub like a professional.

Ruth smiled. Her face was smudged with grime, her eyes weary, it seemed to her that her back would break from aching. "I've heard," she said, "that the best recipe for getting one's mind off one's troubles is hard work. Mopping about 70 miles of cement corridors ought to do it for me."

Mrs. Bond was philosophical. "I think you're right, dearie. I never did know any mental anguish myself that wasn't made better just by hard work. Keep your hands busy, get yourself good and tired and you'll be too weary to stay awake and worry.

But that recipe didn't quite work for Ruth. Her body may have been weary, but her mind was fresh and alert. Her mind kept going over and over the trouble, and there seemed scant light ahead.

To be sure, she was not greatly worried over her stay at the jail. She had done no real wrong, committed no actual crime. Her past could be checked easily.

For 17 years of her life Ruth had lived in an average middle-class home with loving parents who shielded her pathway. Death snatched them away.

Then there has been the small life insurance and planning with Jerry as to how the two of them, all alone now, could go on best. No, there wasn't anything very suspicious about her early life.

She would be released from jail soon enough, Ruth knew that. But what to do next How could she go back to the old job? How could she turn away, forever, from the sweet awakening interest of new love?

The papers, still filled with the story of the Bradleys and of the tragic murder of young Dr. McGuire, were optimistic about the returning health of Jim Bradley.

One of the evening papers had said:

"Meanwhile James Bradley seems to be winning his fight against death. Although physicians have not allowed him to be questioned as yet, police expect that within another 24 hours he will be strong enough to submit to some questioning."

To Jim.

Ruth decided that she would go to Jim as soon as he grew strong enough to listen to her story, that she would make a complete confession to him of her innocent, but foolish entrance into his life and of how that innocent pretense had grown.

Almost as swiftly as she made it she rejected that plan. Jim had every reason to despise her. Even though she might explain convincingly how she had come to his home, it would be hard to explain how she had stayed, how she had gone on and on with the Bradleys even to the pretense at a wedding. No, Jim could never forgive her for that. Nor did she dare face him.

Robert Reagan came at 11. He seemed quietly pleased, absolutely sure of himself. He smiled at Ruth in her scrubwoman attire.

"I tried to get her not to," Mrs. Bond explained volubly, "but she just would. She said working helped get her mind off her troubles. But come along now, Ruth. Mr. Reagan tells me he's got it all arranged. You're going out today."

"Going out today," Ruth's happy mind simply chanted the joyous words over and over again in an ecstatic refrain. Her hands trembled so that she could scarcely unhook her clothing. "Tell him I won't be long. Mrs. Bond, please do."

"Fix Up."

"I will," Mrs. Bond promised. "Now fix yourself up nicely, honey. And forget all about this unhappy experience. Now I'll go and get your Mrs. Murphy ready and you come and help me as soon as soon as you can. She's a sight I honesly think she's cried every minute since she's been in here."

Abigail was a sight. Her face was swollen, her hair uncombed, her clothing rumpled. Together Mrs. Bond and Ruth made her as presentable as they could.

But Abigail was in no mood to be happy. "Cheer up?" she grumbled. "Cheer up? You tell me to cheer up when I haven't any job any more and I don't know where I'm going or what I'm going to do?"

"I do say cheer up," Ruth insisted. I think you'r going right back to the Bradleys to work."

But even that did not comfort Abigail. Once outside the jail doors she proceeded just as quickly as she could to board a street car. She refused absolutely to step into Mr. Reagan's car and she treated him with as much distaste and distrust as she treated Ruth.

"I can't understand the poor old girl," Mr. Reagan said once Abigail had boarded her car. "She was so willing to leave you today and yesterday she told about how she had taken care of you when you were a little thing."

"She changed her mind," Ruth explained. "It seems that the real June had a scar on her shoulder. I haven't a scar. I proved my identity to Abigail. She's just as sure now that I'm not her Miss June as she was sure yesterday that I was."

"I'm sure you're not June Bradley, too," Mr. Reagan said with conviction.

"You looked me up?"

"Yes. My son, the Junior Mr. Reagan, drove to Des Moines yesterday. I've just had a long distance telephone call from him. He checks your story in every particular. So do Des Moines police who have looked you up there. I think you haven't very much to worry about now."

"Is Mr. Bradley going to get well?"

"I think the physicians believe that there is every chance for him."

"Then I'm free to go back to Des Moines?"

"I'm afraid not exactly that." Mr. Reagan appraised the girl with his shrewd, calculating eyes. "I'm afraid you must stay in Chicago for a while yet. There's the legal side of it, you see. If Mr. Bradley gets well and if the man who shot Dr. McGuire is apprehended, the legal charges against you amount to very little."

And Pascoe?

"Do they have any idea where Pascoe it?"

"The police authorities are at work right now on the story you told them of Dr. McGuire and his argument with the man Pascoe, but so far none of them have been overtaken and although they've searched almost continuously, they haven't found the gun yet. In fact, they've only one clew. One of Jim Bradley's cars, the roadster, is missing. They must have gotten away in that."

"And my brother?" Ruth was almost afraid to ask.

"Not a trace or a sign."

"Where do you want me to go." Ruth ventured at last "I haven't any friends in Chicago. I haven't the least idea where I can go."

Mr. Reagan had an idea. He watched Ruth's face shrewdly as he told it to her. "Jim is asking for you."

"Asking for me?" It seemed to Ruth that she would stop breathing from sheer excitement. "Asking for me?"

"Yes. You were the first person he asked for when he regained consciousness. He wanted to see his wife."

"His wife?" Ruth wondered if Mr. Reagan could hear how her heart pounded.

"I think you must go," the dignified attorney was saying. "He's very ill. You won't be permitted to spend much time with him. But if you do not go, I'm afraid the shock of an explanation——"

"I'll go," Ruth promised, and of a sudden the gray, gloomy day was gay with the sunshine in her heart.

Child's Desire To Hear Jazz Called Normal

By ALICE CLARISSA RICHMOND

It is not unusual to meet parents who are so excessively musical that they cannot bear jazz, and so forbid their children to play it or to tune in on radio programs of jazz. Then they complain that their children, with all the advantages of music in the home, and a cultural environment full of the best music, do not like music at all.

These same parents, however, do not limit their own or their children's reading to the classics only, nor do they bar from their homes pictures of the modern-primitive type. Wide tastes in any of the arts are permissible, indeed desirable until it comes to music.

They realize too, that to insist on only good literature and art and to bar the trash from the house, is very apt to foster a taste for the meretricious and turn the children away from the best. Human nature is peculiarly contrary, and invariably seeks the forbidden, shunning what is forced on it.

Jazz has a definite place and function in the scheme of things. It is based on rhythm, one of the most primitive expressions of mankind, and one which every child needs to complete his development. Dancing is natural, and to dance one needs special music with a pronounced beat. The earliest music was closely allied with the dance, and the child who rejoices in the primitive tempo and syncopation of jazz is merely exhibiting an inclination which goes back to his prehistoric ancestors.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Air in the Digestive Tract.

Few of us realize how much air we swallow with food and drink. Once air enters the digestive tract it takes on a new meaning because it is responsible for many symptoms, some of which may be distressing.

Where do these gases come from? Either (1) they are swallowed, (2) are released from the circulating blood, or (3) are given off as the result of chemical changes in the intestinal contents (fermentation).

Belching is common in those who eat rapidly or who fail to chew their food thoroughly. Thus many will have undue stomach fullness accompanied by considerable discomfort following a bolted meal. An air-filled stomach can follow a profuse excretion of saliva which compels persistent swallowing. This results from nervousness or from irritation within the throat or mouth.

If the air passes into the intestine or is excreted into this area from the blood we have a condition known as borborygmus. This word indicates annoying intestinal rumblings and gurglings that are often audible to bystanders. Occasionally, these are of stomach origin and are caused by forcible contractions of the diaphragm. When breathing is conducted largely with the chest muscles the symptom disappears.

When too much starchy food is taken chemical reactions are associated with the liberation of gas. Furthermore, bacterial decomposition within the intestine may throw off marsh gas and other compounds.

It requires a good deal of courage on the part of the physician to advise his patient that his symptoms are brought about by his habit of eating air. If ye would avoid becoming gas bags we must eat slowly, chew food thoroughly, drink only a moderate amount of fluid with meals, and stick to a balanced diet.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

One Who Cannot Afford to Entertain Should Not Incur Burdensome Social Obligations.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last fall my father, a well-known professional man and my favorite companion, died suddenly, leaving my mother with two children (myself, 19, and my brother, 20) $10,000 life insurance and a widow's pension. My brother was then in college and I was attending a local art school, having graduated from high school the previous June.

Mary Haworth

Mother, who is rather frail and delicate, has never made her own living and only recently assumed management of her own home. Therefore, though intelligent and college educated, she is incapable of supporting herself. I stopped school and took a job in dad's office and my brother continued in school until he finished the semester. He did not remain for the next semester as he was not doing well in his studies and mother could not meet the expense.

• • • •

I am paid much better than I deserve (out of consideration for dad) and out of what I earn I save one-half, pay my mother one-fifth for board, buy all my meals out, attend art school every evening and take a business course six hours a week. When my bills and tuition are paid I haven't much for clothes and amusements, but feel little need for these things since drawing is the thing I love most.

• • • •

When brother withdrew from school he took a job in a broker's office, where he makes a third of what I do. But he is paid for overtime and works overtime nearly every day. He eats all meals except lunch at home, doesn't go to school and saves nothing. Up to now he has paid no board, as he has been meeting personal bills, but is nearly out of the woods now. He seems to have no idea of doing his part, however. On his birthday he will inherit a little money from dad and has just announced he will buy a car. It would be none of my business how he spends his money if he were doing his part, but he isn't and he cannot support himself and a car on what he makes. Meanwhile mother is carrying him and is constantly digging a little deeper into her small principal.

A couple has been sharing our apartment, paying an amount which almost meets the rent and it seems to me even with brother a deadweight on her hands, mother should be able to manage within her income plus what I pay her. But she is not very good at pinching pennies and refuses to be bothered with budgets. My brother is a good boy, very popular with the social set in which he circulates and wouldn't wilfully hurt anybody in the world. He just seems to be pleasure loving and not very thoughful. At the present rate of her spending mother's money won't last ten years. Both mother and brother laugh when I draw a gloomy picture of the time when all the money will be gone. What should be done?

• • • •

Also, I have a personal problem. I have a good deal of talent as well as love for drawing. My high school art teachers thought me very talented indeed and I was chosen art editor of our annual out of a class of 450 students. But I have had all the conceit knocked out of me since coming to art school. My work is very crude and it will take years of hard work before I can expect to be a real artist . . . By September I will have saved $500 on which I can study for a year without sponging on mother. When I am 21 I will inherit $1,500 from dad. As far as I am concerned I do not mind taking the chance, but I don't want to be selfish. What do you think I should do?

BARELY NINETEEN.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR NINETEEN: Under the circumstances, I think you should look out for yourself and your own interests, and let your mother and your brother shift for themselves. So long as they feel you can be depended upon to do the family worrying and the family bacon-winning, they probably will never make any serious effort to discipline their spendthrift tendencies and organize their lives within their means. Frail and delicate your mother may be, but if she is intelligent and college educated and has a nest egg of cash and influential contacts, she can find some way of modestly augmenting her income if she looks for the way.

• • • •

Your brother should be made to live within his income, if only by your mother's refusing to meet the discrepancy between his income and his expenditures. She can flatly refuse to be responsible for his debts and insist that he make some contribution to the family larder, if only $5 a month. His income, minus $5, is sufficient to keep him well dressed and to provide him with transportation and living expenses; and if he cannot afford to entertain, he has no business incurring extravagant social obligations. His first business is to prepare himself for some vocation or profession, even though that entails hard work, laborious study and certain self-sacrifices.

Prince Georges C. of C. Plans Review of Year

Nomination of Officers Will Feature Ladies' Night Program.

Nominations for officers will be a highlight of the annual ladies' night meeting of the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce tonight at Beaver Dam Country Club. The meeting will be preceded by a dinner at 6:45 p. m.

Col. George H. Calvert, jr., president of the Maryland Society of Washington, will speak on changes in Prince Georges County in the last 30 years.

Ralph W. Powers, president of the chamber, will review accomplishments of last year. Vincent C. Tompkins, jr., is chairman of the arrangements committee.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Protestants Episcopal Diocese of Washington will meet in Holy Trinity Church at Collington today. It will be the last gathering of the season.

Holy communion will be celebrated at 11 a. m. by the Rev. Fred A. Cook, rector of Holy Trinity parish. The business meeting will follow a box luncheon in the parish hall. The Rev. Michael Kiffenbrock will be the principal speaker. He will discuss Alaska. Mrs. R. Winston Holt, diocesan president, will conduct the meeting.

The Hyattsville Woman's Community Club has elected Mrs. Guy S. Meloy, Mrs. Warren W. Cole and Mrs. Henry H. Lyon as delegates to the annual meeting of the Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs to be held May 22, at College Park.

Announcement has been made by the executive committee of the Maryland State Department of the American Legion that the initiation team of Snyder-Farmer Post, No. 3, Hyattsville, has been selected as the official degree team for the State.

The third annual breakfast of the Holy Name Society of St. Jerome's Catholic Church, Hyattsville, will be held next Sunday at 8 a. m. in the Masonic Hall, preceded by mass at the church when new members will be formally received, and by Holy Communion. Breakfast this year will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of St. Jerome's Church.

Charles V. Joyce, of Cheverly, has been appointed chairman of the Memorial Day celebration committee of Snyder-Farmer Post, No. 3, American Legion, of Hyattsville. Other members named by Post Commander John J. Buckley are Carl W. Walzl, E. J. Cannon and Hugh McClay. Exercises are planned at the Memorial War Cross, Defense Highway and the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, Bladensburg.

The following delegates and alternates to the annual convention of the Maryland State Firemen's Ladies' Auxiliary next month at Hagerstown have been elected by the auxiliary of the Cottage City Volunteer Fire Department: Delegates, Mrs. Edna Pitts, Mrs. Samuel Tayman, Mrs. William Bell, Mrs. John Nebel and Mrs. Elizabeth Lusby. Alternates, Mrs. Lillian Roberts, Mrs. John White, Mrs. Agnes McGee and Mrs. A. Ruck.

Mrs. Maxwell Covington has been elected president of the Brandywine Woman's Club, with Mrs. Abner Mason, vice president; Mrs. Hunter Edelen, recording secretary; Mrs. Ray Blandford, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Albert Swanson, treasurer, and Mrs. Walton Lusby, director.

Officials of the towns of Cottage City and Colmar Manor have received permission from the Maryland State Roads Commission to erect a traffic signal at the intersection of Barney street and the Baltimore boulevard, it has been announced.

The permit calls for the green light to show for 45 seconds on the boulevard and 15 seconds on Barney street, with the amber light showing 5 seconds on both. A central control switch will be maintained in the Cottage City firehouse so that the firemen can stop all traffic when answering alarms.

The Women's Parish Guild of St. Phillips' Episcopal Church, Laurel, Md., will give a chicken dinner in the parish hall tomorrow night. Mrs. Brunard Millard, president of the guild, is in charge of arrangements. This week will be the eighty-eighth anniversary of the consecration of St. Phillips' Church.

Plummer Sample Ballots Stir Montgomery Vote Battle Today

Lewis' Backers in Democratic Fight for Congressional Nomination Charge Slips Are Designed to Fool Public.

Sample ballots being distributed by backers of Clay Plummer, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives in the western Maryland district against the incumbent, David J. Lewis, early yesterday transformed a quiet Montgomery County political campaign into a hot battle for votes in the Democratic primary election today.

The Plummer sample ballots are identical in size, shape and color with the organization sample ballots, save that they are marked for Plummer for Congress instead of Lewis, who previously had been indorsed by the local Democratic organization, and bear the signature of Plummer's political agent, whereas the Lewis ballots are signed by Curtis Walker, chairman of the Democratic State central committee for Montgomery County.

Last-minute appearance of the Plummer ballots was charged by the county Democratic organization as a ruse to confuse Democratic voters into believing the organization is supporting Plummer instead of Lewis. All of the other organization candidates, including President Roosevelt and six of the eight aspirants for delegates to the State convention, are marked on the ballot.

The ballots first appeared in Silver Spring, county Democratic stronghold. They were at once answered by a letter distributed from door to door by the Democratic organization, which charged that: "These ballots are intended to deceive the voters into the belief that the Democratic county organization is for Plummer because they are reported to be marked for some other Democratic organization candidates."

Meanwhile Plummer had a sound truck circulating throughout the county boosting his candidacy.

Representative Lewis has made no local campaign to date beyond the distribution of marked ballots by the local Democratic leaders.

Whether or not a heavy Republican vote will be cast depends largely on the interest that is evinced by the voters in the seven-man fight for the Republican nomination for Congress. There is no Republican candidate for President on the ballot, and only a mild campaign is being put on by the ten candidates for the six delegates to the State convention, all pledged to support Gov. Harry W. Nice for the Republican nomination for President.

The Republican candidates for Congress are Albert A. Doub, Perry A. Nicklin, Thomas L. Popp and A. Charles Stewart, all of Allegany County; Harry W. LeGore and Leo Weinberg, of Frederick County, and Ernest W. Miller, of Washington County.

The organization Republican group led by Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the Republican State central committee for the county, is backing LeGore, while a group led by Judge Harold C. Smith, Rockville police magistrate, is backing Stewart.

Voters in both primaries will ballot in a referendum on a bill to legalize certain games of chance when conducted by volunteer firemen, churches, fraternal orders and charitable institutions in the county.

The Rockville Volunteer Fire Department will meet tomorrow night at the Fire Department Building at Rockville. Preparations will be made for the annual supper Wednesday and Thursday from 5 to 8 p. m.

A card party for the benefit of the Sligo Park Hills (Md.) Garden Club will be held Thursday at 8 p. m. at Jesup Blair Community Hall, Silver Spring, Md.

Election Set for Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Deer Park, Md., May 3.—Voters of Deer Park will go to the polls tomorrow to elect municipal officers and to cast their ballot in the primary election to select nominees for Congress. Alonzo Warnick and Ramsey Smith are candidates in the mayoral election, while members seeking seat in council are Theodore Marley, Earl Hinebaugh, Bruce Lohr and Truman Mosser. Two councilmen will be elected.

Session to Open Tuesday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Md., May 3.—Final arrangements are being made for the Tri-County W. C. T. U. convention, of Talbot, Caroline and Dorchester counties, to be held Tuesday at Hurlock. Sessions will be held in the Baptist Church, commencing at 10 o'clock with an election of officers.

Dr. Victor Meyers is general chairman of arrangements. Committee chairmen are Bryon J. Brooks, tickets; Mrs. Jesse Roberts, entertainment, and Mrs. Alice Semones, decorations.

The court of honor and review for Arlington County Boy Scouts was held Saturday night in Scout Hall at Ballston.

R. F. Snyder and D. E. Bundage, of Troop No. 149, were advanced to second class. Those receiving the merit badges were J. A. Solomon, carpentry, and Percy L. Ports, life saving.

Guy Irving Burch, secretary of the board of directors of the American Eugenics Society, will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Arlington Hospital Association tomorrow at 1 p. m. at the Lyon Park Community House.

Mrs. Ruby G. Simpson, member of the county school board, is announced as the principal speaker at the meeting of the Arlington Ridge Citizens Association Wednesday night at the Hume School.

Mrs. Simpson will discuss the $250,000 bond issue, on which the taxpayers will vote on May 12, for a junior high school.

Plans for the annual field day of the Arlington County Bar Association, to be held June 26 at the Army and Navy County Club, are being completed by the committee of which Arthur C. Stickley 2d is chairman. Chairman Stickley is being assisted by Clarence R. Ahalt, Emery N. Hosmer, Albert M. Jones, Henry J. Klinge and John C. McCarthy.

The Arlington County Bar Association will hold its monthly meetnig at 2 p. m. today in the courthouse.

Army Twins Assigned To Duties at Ft. Hoyle

Herschel D. Baker and Herbert E. Baker, twin Army captains, who served together in the World War and have held commissions in the same Army units most of the time since, will arrive at Fort Hoyle, Md., this week to take up new duties.

The pair arrived at San Francisco last week from Honolulu, where they served their last assignment.

Born in Illinois, the sons of an Army medical officer, the twins enlisted as privates in the same troop of the Second Cavalry in 1917. During the Meuse-Argonne offensive both were wounded in action—Herschel on October 26, 1918, and Herbert on the following day.

Fairfax County School Clinics To Start Today

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 243, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The Fairfax County Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations and School and Community Leagues will hold a series of pre-school clinics through its local school groups under the direction of the county public health unit.

Because of the importance of examining children who will enter school for the first time next fall, Dr. A. L. Carson, jr., county health director has urged parents to take advantage of the clinics. Parents are requested to bring their children to the clinics in person, it was stated.

Clinics have been announced as follows:

Fairfax Elementary School, this morning from 9 to 11 a. m.; Forestville Elementary School, tomorrow from 9 to 11 o'clock; Falls Church and Chesterbrook Schools, Wednesday, from 9 to 11 a. m.; Annandale School, Thursday, from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m., and Herndon School, Friday, from 9 to 11 a. m.

In an effort to acquaint the farmers of Fairfax County with the new Federal soil conservation program a series of community meetings has been arranged for this week by County Agricultural Agent H. B. Derr.

At each of the meetings committeemen will be present to answer questions about the program and to assist in the filing of work sheets. The schedule of community meetings has been announced as today at 7:30 p. m. in the Herndon High School, Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. in the Forestville School and Friday at 7:30 p. m. in the Vienna School.

New Boys' Club To Be Formed At Alexandria

Backers of Group to Elect Heads Wednesday Night; Program Planned.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A general meeting of all supporters of the Boys' Club to effect a permanent organization and election of officers will be held Wednesday night in the George Mason Hotel. It has been decided the cornerstone of the building will be laid Saturday.

It is understood the organization will be incorporated under the name of the Alexandria Boys' Club. The papers of incorporation will be prepared by Harry F. Kennedy. It is understood there will be a governing board of 15 members, to be elected for terms of one, two and three years, the board to elect officers.

The building will be the gift of Dr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett and will be maintained by subscription. There are on the list of subscribers more than 250 persons, paying $60 each, covering a period of five years. Later it is proposed to obtain additional subscribers, at a rate to be decided upon later.

An entertainment program is being arranged for the cornerstone-laying. The ceremonies will be under direction of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, of which Dr. Barrett is a past master.

The foundations for the building have been completed and the erection is progressing rapidly.

Martin E. Greene, secretary for the War Memorial Committee, has called a meeting for tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

The Nevell S. Greenaway Bible Class of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will meet at 8 p. m. today at the church.

The Holy Cross Alumnae of St. Mary's Academy will give a Mother's Day program and tea next Sunday from 3 to 5 o'clock at the academy.

The annual May fete of St. Agnes School will be given the afternoon of May 14. A May king and queen will be selected from the elementary grades.

Japanese, Scandinavian, Dutch and Scotch dances will be given in costume.

Mayor L. P. Daniel of Falls Church has designated this week as clean-up week for the town. Beginning today the semi-annual collection of unburnable trash will be made throughout the town. It has been requested that residents place the trash in containers convenient for collection. Owners of vacant lots are urged to clear them of weeds and trash.

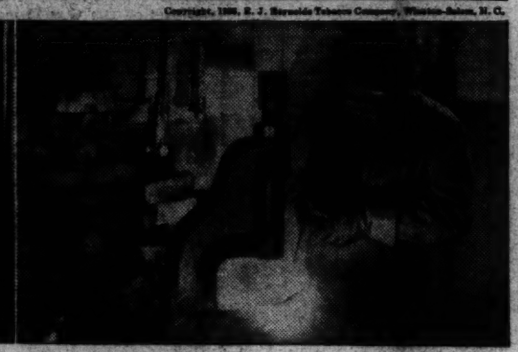
THE WINNER! Kelly Petillo, at the wheel above, came first in the 500-mile Indianapolis Speedway classic. Petillo says: "Camels hit the spot. People tell me that if they went through the strain, tension, and vibration that I go through in a race, they wouldn't enjoy eating for a week. I've found that smoking Camels—during and after meals—goes a long way in helping keep my digestion in good shape."

WOMAN'S WORK is never done, according to the old saying. Mrs. Frank Smith, photographed as she was marketing, is a typical modern homemaker. "Camels are a bright spot even on the most trying days," says Mrs. Smith. "A Camel when I'm tired gives me a 'lift' and smooths out my nerves too. Food tastes better—my digestion works smoothly when I smoke Camels." Women appreciate Camel's mildness.

ALL ABOARD! Away from home—different food—irregular hours—a business man meets many conditions that upset the normal routine of digestion. Camels stimulate digestion no matter where you are. That's one reason so many Camel smokers say: "Camels set you right!" Smoke them for digestion's sake. It's a pleasure you can enjoy often. For Camels never tire your taste or jangle your nerves.



THE FLARE of the welding arc climbs to a temperature of 8700° Fahrenheit! Dan Rafferty, master welder, guides the torch. Here's a job where good digestion counts. "A man has to have a steady hand and a steady eye for regular work," says Dan. "Smoking Camels during and after meals helps my digestion. Camels taste mild and rich." Turn to Camels—for their matchless flavor and for digestion's sake.

FOR DIGESTION'S SAKE SMOKE CAMELS

PROBING THE SECRETS of the deep is Henry Siemer's job (above). "Me and food get along swell together," this master diver says. "Camels make food taste better and digest better."

Smoking Camels a Pleasant Way to Encourage Good Digestion, Good Feeling, and Increase Alkalinity

Modern days are trying. So much to do. So little time. Nerves get "wound up." Digestion slows down. Hurry, worry, and strain tend to interfere with normal processes of digestion.

It is a scientific fact that smoking Camels has an alkalizing effect, through increasing the flow of the alkaline digestive fluids, helping to keep digestion on its proper course. You sense a comforting "lift" and feeling of well-being as you enjoy the delicate flavor of your Camel.

Four Injured In Maryland Car Collision

Six Persons, Cut Bruised in Traffic Mishaps in Capital Area.

Four persons were injured, one seriously, in a collision between four cars and a truck on the Baltimore Boulevard near Muirkirk, Md., last night.

Several other persons were hurt in accidents in and near the city over the week-end.

All the injured persons were occupants of a car operated by Arthur T. Hall, of Baltimore, which overturned after striking the car of Emmett H. Piper, of Baltimore, when the latter slowed down for a puddle.

Hall's 12-year-old son, Frank, was removed to Sibley Hospital in a serious condition with a fractured skull. His wife, Mary; his mother-in-law, Mrs. J. J. Mack, and himself were taken to St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore with minor cuts and bruises.

Three Escape Hurts.

Piper, the drivers of the other cars, Clinton Rees, of Pisgah, Md., and Dr. Rudolph Tulacek, of Baltimore, and August Palmisano, of 1216 Oates street northeast, the truck driver, were uninjured. Rees' car was destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Cameron Clark, of Bedminster, N. J., was taken to Emergency Hospital with a fractured leg after a collision between the car in which she was riding and a taxicab operated by Harvey W. Smith of 1541 Twenty-fifth street southeast. The accident occurred at Maryland avenue and Third street southwest. The car in which Mrs. Clark was a passenger was driven by Walter Franzen, also of Bedminster.

A motorcycle-automobile accident near Mount Harmony, Md., injured two Washingtonians, including Mrs. Anne Venables, 75, of 1329 Harvard street northwest, whose right arm was fractured.

Mrs. Venables was a passenger in a car operated by John Dulin, 23, of 1270 New Hampshire avenue northwest. The driver of the motorcycle, Lee R. Wolf, of 2606 Bladensburg road northeast, suffered a fractured thigh and ankle.

As the result of another motorcycle accident near Burley, Md., Evelyn Biddle, of 1246 C street northeast, was in a serious condition at Sibley Hospital here. Miss Biddle, riding tandem on a motorcycle, suffered a fractured skull when the vehicle upset after a skid.

Walter Scheffel, 6, of 1212 Eleventh street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts to his face and shock after he had been knocked down by a car while playing in front of his home. James C. Robey, of 635 Elliott street northeast, driver of the car, was not held.

Alfred F. Turner, 40, of 1318 Ridge place southeast, suffered a broken left arm and severe lacerations when the automobile he was driving was in collision with another in the 4100 block Alabama avenue southeast. Turner was treated at Casualty Hospital. William Spencer, 27, of 407 Fourth street northwest, operator of the other automobile, was not hurt.

Two Men Injured.

Two men were hurt, one seriously, when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a street car at Third street and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

The men, John Wash, 29, of Clarendon, Va., driver of the car, and a passenger, William Posey, 30, of 816 B street northeast, were both taken to Casualty Hospital.

Posey suffered minor cuts and bruises and Wash a brain concussion and severe cuts. The street car was operated by Ray Hoffman, 45, of 1102 Fourth street northeast. He was uninjured.

Ralph Hammer, 20, of Riverdale, Md., was treated at Casualty Hospital for several fractured ribs when he was brought here by the Bladensburg rescue squad from an accident in Berwyn, Md.

Harry G. Jones, 22, of Hyattsville, Md., suffered lacerations on his face and arms and a possible brain concussion when the automobile he was driving ran off the road and overturned in East Riverdale, Md. His condition was said to be not serious.

Meanwhile, Louis Brittle, 14, of 507 H street northwest, remained in a critical condition in Emergency Hospital. The boy was taken to the hospital Friday after he slipped beneath the wheels of a truck while "hooking" a ride.

River Concert Barge Is Sought By Symphony

Charter of Craft to Supplant Navy's Estimated to Cost $500.

Refusal of the Navy Department to lend the National Symphony Orchestra a barge for its summer concert series, as it did last year, may force the organization to charter a private barge, Mrs. Mildred Fiske, secretary, said yesterday.

How much such a barge would cost, Mrs. Fiske could not say. Potomac boat-owners estimated, however, that a barge somewhat smaller than the Navy vessel could be chartered for about $10 a day. Since the concert season runs from 6 to 8 weeks the cost would be about $500.

Although the orchestra already has applied to the National Capital Parks for use of the same watergates as last year no formal request for a barge has been made of the Navy, Mrs. Fiske said. The Navy, it is understood, is not inclined to grant the favor as last year there was a delay in returning the boat after the concert series was over.

This delay, Mrs. Fiske explained, was not the fault of the Symphony officials, but resulted from the slowness with which the National Park officials removed the symphonic shell that was set up on the boat for the musicians.

Final action on whether or not a private barge will be hired is not expected to be taken until C. C. Cappel, the orchestra manager, returns on Tuesday. The semi-weekly programs are scheduled to be held Tuesday and Friday nights beginning July 7.

District Architect Wins Craft Medal For Creative Work

John Joseph Earley, architectural sculptor of Washington, was announced winner of the craftsmanship medal of the American Institute of Architects.

The medal is "for meritorious and original work in the application of color to masonry and the development of a new technique for the decorative use of concrete."

Earley is widely known for his use of a plastic mosaic process. He collaborated with Lorado Taft, noted sculptor, in the construction of "The Fountain of Time," and decorated the interior of the Church of the Sacred Heart in Washington.

Also honored by the Architects were John D. Rockefeller, jr., for re-creating Colonial Williamsburg, Va., and Robert Edmond Jones, designer for the theater. Jones received the fine arts medal "for his conspicuous attainment as a designer for the theater."

The awards were announced by Stephen F. Voorhees, president of the Institute, which begins its sixty-eighth national convention tomorrow in Old Point Comfort and Williamsburg, Va.

Cab Driver Held In Girl's Death

Carl Loveridge, 29-year-old taxicab driver, will face a coroner's jury today at an inquest into the fatal shooting of Miss Jessie Posey, 25 who was killed on the front steps of her home, 244 Ninth street southeast, Friday.

Loveridge, who lives in the 1200 block N street northwest, was arrested shortly after the shooting by Fifth Precinct police. Police said he admitted shooting at the girl, but said he did not know whether he hit her.

Miss Posey was shot just below the left eye. Witnesses said she had just returned from a party with friends when Loveridge drove up in his cab and hailed her. When she failed to heed the call a shot was fired.

Police after questioning Loveridge said he admitted having a quarrel with the girl and that he was jealous of her. A .38-caliber revolver was found in Loveridge's possession when he was arrested.

Policeman Injured.

Policeman Donald B. Plant, 30, of the Fourth Precinct, sustained a sprained back and bruises yesterday when he fell into a coal hole while making an arrest in the 200 block Twelfth street southwest. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

Many Notables To Attend Fete Of Press Club

President Will Be Honor Guest at Founder's Day Dinner.

President Roosevelt will be guest of honor at the annual Founder's Day dinner of the National Press Club, to be held in the club auditorium Saturday night.

Vice President John N. Garner also will be present. Other high-ranking officials, who will be at the head table, include Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Rear Admiral Joseph R. Defrees, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard.

A series of skits and other entertainment will be provided by club members. John Charles Thomas, in accepting the invitation to sing a number of songs, said he would try to have a "ditty" ready for the occasion. Ann Leaf, radio star, will play an electric organ during the dinner. Another attraction will be a series of songs by George O'Connor, popular local singer. The Navy Band will play, with Lieut. Charles Benter conducting.

The dinner, which is unique among affairs of its kind in that only club members are eligible to attend, will start promptly at 7:15 p. m.

President Roosevelt and other distinguished officials, who will be present, are club members.

Howard Conference Will Discuss Crises

The second annual conference on world problems, under auspices of the division of social sciences of Howard University will be held in the auditorium of Frederick Douglass Memorial Hall, on the university campus, Friday and Saturday, the subject being "The Crisis of Modern Imperialism in Africa and the Far East."

The clash of culture in Africa will be discussed Friday morning by Dr. Richard C. Thurnwald, of Yale University; Dr. Melville J. Herskovitz, of Northwestern University, and Abe J. B. Desmore, of South Africa. An afternoon discussion of the political implications of imperialism in Africa will be partcipated in by Dr. William Koren jr., of Princeton University; Dr. Benjamin H. Kagwa, of East Africa; Peter Koinange, of Kenya Colony and Akintunde B. Dipeolu, of Nigeria.

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson will preside at the evening session Friday, when economic implications of imperialism in Africa will be discussed by Dr. Julius E. Lipps, of Columbia University; Dr. Emory Ross, of the African Welfare Committee, and Dr. W. O. Brown. At the same time the clash of cultures in Asia will be discussed by Mr. Nathaniel Peffer and Dr. Haridas T. Muzumdar, editor of "India Today and Tomorrow."

New Rector Of Catholic U. Tells of Aims

Mgr. Corrigan Greets Faculty at Informal Reception.

Is Noted Educator; Has No Plans for Changes at Present.

The Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Catholic University's new rector, greeted members of his faculty for the first time at an informal reception yesterday afternoon, and told them he was glad to be in Washington.

The Capital, he said, offers the student many opportunities, and he intends to have Catholic University continue to take advantage of the city's many facilities and resources.

The university, which he has just come here to direct, is in a strategic position to mold Catholic opinion throughout the United States, he feels. All orders of the Catholic religion are now represented here, and so are many lay organizations. The university through its instruction can do much to keep Catholic thinking on an even keel.

Youth in Ferment.

"American youth today is in a State of ferment," said Mgr. Corrigan, whose work as a Catholic leader, educator, and welfare director is widely recognized. "And it is the duty of our university as the center of Catholic education in the United States, to continue to state and emphasize the basis philosophy of Catholicity."

The Monsignor, who came here from Overbrook, Pa., where he was rector of St. Charles Seminary since 1925, arrived here three weeks ago to take over his new duties as successor to the Most Rev. James Hugh Ryan, recently named Bishop of Omaha. In that time, he said, he has not decided on detailed plans for the university's future. Such plans, he believed, would not be made until the current year is inished.

The new rector is a big man—he is described by his friends as "a big man physically and mentally." He is also a quiet man, who spends much of his time in study. Although his career has made extensive administrative demands upon him he has served as chancellor of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, as a director of charities, as a parish priest, and a layman's retreat director, in addition to teaching—he is still a student. His academic specialty is theology.

Impressed With Opportunities.

He is impressed with the opportunities for study and research in the Capital.

"The university will continue to take advantage of the resources of the Capital to afford students, both graduate and undergraduate, professional and collegiate, an opportunity to use their nearness to original sources," he said.

The reception yesterday afternoon was in the parlors of Caldwell Hall, on the campus. Introduced by Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick, who served as acting rector of the university until the new rector's appointment, nearly 200 priests, lay professors and their wives, and other friends met Mgr. Corrigan and exchanged greetings with him.

Coloradoan Will Give Valedictory at C. U.

John H. McDonald, of Grand Junction, Colo., a senior law student at Catholic University, will be valedictorian of the June graduating class. He was elected at a senior class meeting in a contest with two other nominees, Bernard J. Ryan, of Chataeugay, N. Y., and Ralph Rabenovets, of 3556 Warder street northwest.

McDonald is chairman of the student Council, and belongs to the Abbey Club, and the Harlequins Dramatic Society. He also has been a member of the Shahan Debating Society and is a winner of the annual rector's oratorical contest.

If You Still Have An Appendix Have It Out, Dr. Pfeifer Advises

Laws and Operations Make Busy Man of Surgeon Serving in House.

If you still have your appendix, you should have it removed without waiting for it to become abscessed and possibly ruptured. Maybe, of course, the organ will never cause trouble, but the wisest course is to have it out and make sure.

This was the advice given by the Representative in Congress from the Third New York District. Dr. Joseph L. Pfeifer was not speaking for the Congressional Record, but as chief surgeon of Brooklyn's oldest hospital, n whch capacty he has removed more than 5,000 appendices in the last decade.

Calling a member from the House floor to interview him on surgical operations, as was done Saturday, may seem odd, but in the case of Representative Pfeifer, M. D., F. A. C. S., it was quite appropriate.

Now rounding out his freshman term, Dr. Pfeifer has been a Democrat since he came of voting age 23 years ago, but he never had designs on political office. Even now, facing a tough fight for the Democratic nomination which will be decided in the September primary, his main concerns are the acute appendicitis cases arriving daily at St. Catherine's Hospital, and his House duties.

Commutes Almost Daily.

Ever since he came to Congress in January, 1935, Dr. Pfeifer has commuted almost daily between his patients and family in Brooklyn and his office here. His routine is patterned like this:

At 2 a. m. he removes an appendix at St. Catherine's Hospital. Maybe two or three. A few hours later he is aboard a train or a plane, depending upon convenience, bound for Washington. Arrives here, examines mail, attends House session and before dusk is en route back to Brooklyn to perform more operations.

One day last year Dr. Pfeifer made two round trips between Washington and New York. While in the Capital, the hospital medical staff keeps him informed by long-distance telephone of the condition of his patients and the arrival of new cases. While in Brooklyn, he is posted similarly by his secretary on major legislation coming up for a vote.

By the grace of Nature and Congress, appendices and laws keep coming out and between the two Dr. Pfeifer is probably the busiest man in either House. Sixty-eight New York physicians and surgeons refer appendicitis cases to him, which accounts for his large practice at St. Catherine's.

Dr. Pfeifer has been associated continuously with the same hospital ever since he interned there in 1914. Between 1920 and 1930, he conducted an appendicitis survey which has resulted in the saving of an untold number of lives. With more than 4,000 cases forming the basis of his conclusions, he found it is safer to allow patients with abscessed appendices to keep them, submitting only to so-called interval operations between attacks.

Whenever Dr. Pfeifer has a moment's leisure, which is practically never, he may be found on a bridle path or inspecting his homing pigeons in a Brooklyn loft. His wife and five children and, on infrequent occasions, the surgeon-lawmaker himself live in Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn.

Frances, the eldest daughter, will be graduated from Barnard College next year. She plans to follow in her father's footsteps. Which footstep? Medicine, not Congress.

500 Physicians To See Stomach 'Mirror' Work

Gastroscope to Be Demonstrated to District Medical Society.

The gastroscope, a new instrument that enables physicians to look directly into the interior of a patient's stomach, will be demonstrated at the annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society being held Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

The inventor of the instrument, Dr. Chevalier L. Jackson, of the Temple University medical faculty, will describe the gastroscope and its use in diagnosis. Dr. Lyman Sexton and Dr. David Davis, both of Washington, will demonstrate the instrument on both days.

About 500 physicians are expected to attend the conference, which include both public and professional meetings. At a public meeting in the society building Wednesday night, Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital is to speak on "The Dependency of Modern Civilization on Health."

Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will deliver a talk on "The Modern Crusade" at a luncheon meeting at the Mayflower Wednesday. Another feature of Wednesday's program will be a description by Charles Walter Clarke, of New York City, of that city's method of attacking social diseases.

Sponsors to Honor Kate Smith Here

Before the performance, James L. Fieser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross, will present to Miss Smith a scroll in appreciation of her services during the recent flood.

2 Wilson Case Figures Face Court Today

Sutton and McDermott in Cumberland Under Heavy Guard.

Floodlights on the Jail; Prosecutor to Fight Separate Trials.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cumberland, Md., May 3.—Guarded by sub-machine guns and a dozen District and Maryland policemen, Albert S. Sutton and Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn, were whisked into this mountain town tonight to face trial tomorrow for the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, Washington newspaper route agent.

Shortly after they were safely lodged in the county jail, which is bathed in floodlights as a precaution against their escape, Sutton's attorney, Thomas L. Dawson, secretary of state of Maryland, announced that he would seek a separate trial for his client.

In a surprise move, he said he would ask the Allegany County Court, before which the two men will go on trial tomorrow at 9:30 a. m., to give the men separate trials.

Prosecutor James M. Pugh, who also arrived here today, said he would fight this attempt "to the last ditch."

Under Heavy Guard.

The two defendants arrived here from the District shortly after sunset guarded by heavily-armed Montgomery County police and members of the "Wilson Squad" of the Washington Police Department.

They were removed from the District Jail, where they had been lodged for more than two months, today at 12:30 p. m.

Sutton had been removed from Lorton Reformatory, where he had been held for violation of parole, McDermott was "loaned" to Montgomery County from bleak Alcatraz Federal Prison in San Francisco Bay.

Also in this town tonight were two others connected with the Wilson murder, William Cleary, Philadelphia gunman and former convict, and Dewey Jenkins, who has been indicted for conspiracy in the death of Wilson.

Witnesses for State.

Both are expected to be witnesses for the State. Cleary's evidence at the trial in Rockville last month was one of the main factors in the conviction of Ernest Wellington Myers, sentenced to life imprisonment for his part in the crime.

Cleary, who said he had been ppromisd immunity for turning State's evidence, named Myers as the driver of the death car and McDermott as one of the "trigger men" at the slaying.

He charged that Sutton had planned the murder, which had Edward (Mickey) McDonald, as the intended victim, because McDonald, notorious Washington gambler, had been "muscling in" on Sutton's territory. Wilson was the innocent victim of the bullets.

McDonald is also here. He will be used in the trial as a material witness.

Pugh who will be assisted by Walter A. Huster, State's attorney for Allegheny County, said he will ask the death penalty for the two indicted defendants.

Film Producers Foster Scheme To Help Stage

Will Sponsor Plan to Aid Writers of New Plays; 'Little Egypt' Sues.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—Seven leading motion picture companies will sponsor and finance the distribution of prizes and fellowships to college and young alumni playwrights to prove that Hollywood is not seeking to submerge the stage.

New York's theater guild challenged the movie companies to prove that Hollywood is not seeking to submerge the stage.

New York's theater guild challenged the movie companies to prove their good will toward the stage. As a direct result a "bureau of new plays" was organized today with Theresa Helburn, one of the guild managers, as director.

Prizes totaling $3,000 will be awarded annually, as well as fellowships of $2,500 and scholarships of $1,200. There will be six prizes of $500 each for different types of plays.

Plays will be considered for legitimate production only. The league of New York theaters and the dramatists' guild are negotiating to decide the contract terms upon which prize plays may be purchased for producton.

The movie companies will have, in rotation, the privilege of financing the production of the plays. Royalty rights of the authors will be preserved.

The seven movie companies are Paramount, Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal, Warner Bros. and RKO.

Mrs. Frieda Spyropolous, describing herself as "Little Egypt," a featured dancer of the 1893 World's Fair, in Chicago, has filed suit in Supreme Court against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for using her name in the picture "The Great Ziegfeld," her attorney, Morris E. Dry, disclosed last night.

The suit, which was filed last week, seeks to enjoin the motion picture company from further use of her name and asks $25,000 damages.

Mrs. Spyropolous, who has lived in Chicago with her husband since 1905, claims the producers did not ask her consent to use the name "Little Egypt" for one of the characters in the picture.

The suit, her attorney said, was based upon a New York statute which prohibits the use of the name or picture of a person in motion pictures without consent.

A motion for a temporary injunction is scheduled for argument in Supreme Court today, Dry said.

Gayety

"THE MERRY WHIRL." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 27 scenes, starring Maxine DeShone, supported by "Rags" Ragland, Max Furman, Bert Grant, Franklin Hopkins, Evelyn Brooks, Joy St. Clair, Boots Burns, Alma Mabien, Dolly Hendricks and the Dancing Bryanettes. Dances routined by Frank Bryant; staging by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

It is surprise week at the Gayety. "The Merry Whirl" brings to town, quite without fanfare, two charmers, either of whom might easily uphold the revelatory honors on any burlesque program. Maxine DeShone, whose lovely person and unusually fine singing voice are always welcome, is the billed attraction, with Evelyn Brooks and Joy St. Clair the surprises which Col. James J. Lake has drawn from his inexhaustible bag of tricks.

In this trio of performers there are sufficient variations on the well known theme for continued fascination and entertainment for all tastes.

The comedy for the week is in the capable hands of "Rags" Ragland and Max Furman, whose styles are similar, each working virtually without makeup and depending for farcical effects on the manner of reading lines rather than on outlandish costuming. It is refreshing to watch these two genial buffoons. Their material may not be resplendently new, but it is presented with enthusiasm and spontaneity. Ragland, however, might well turn more power into his voice for the benefit of the customers back of the seventh row.

Franklin Hopkins and Bert Grant, in association with Alma Mabien and Dolly Hendricks, work as the comics' foils, adding further to the effectiveness of the stellar zanies. Hopkins also sings. "Boots" Burns regales the audience with the torrid "Empty Bed Blues."

The Dancing Bryanettes are good and, for a novelty, six of the girls step out of the line for special routines, with Mr. Furman acting as their master of ceremonies. Col. Lake's colorful staging is impressive.

Sarg's Puppets

"A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT." The Tony Sarg Marionettes, sponsored by the Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom, present their version of the story by Mark Twain, puppetized in three acts and ten scenes by A. C. M. Azoy and produced under the personal supervision of Tony Sarg. Puppets by Charles E. Searle and Donald Cordry, cosumes by Pearl B. Graique; music arranged and composed by Richard Williams. At the National Theater. Reviewed Saturday morning by W. A. Whitney.

As an epilogue to the 1935-1936 season of the Children's Theater of New York, the Woman's International League on Saturday morning sponsored a production of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," by the famed Tony Sarg Marionettes at the National Theater.

Already in the mood to enjoy another version of the Mark Twain story, the recent revival of the cinema having renewed the interest, the large audience enthusiastically received this recounting of anachronistic adventures.

The puppetization was preceded by a brief scene, with Mark Twain, Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn introducing and setting the atmosphere for the type of production which was to follow.

We really would like to say that this comedy-drama was smoothly directed, excellently acted and colorfully staged, but we are afraid to, lest it be thought that such comments would personalize the production too much. Yet that is how we feel, for frequently we became lost in the fascinating presentation, which imbued these 18-inch dolls with the power of human actors.

There were times, to be sure, when the marionettes were plainly just that, but, in the large view, they aped human actors with amazing fidelity, for which no little credit should go to Denise Dooley, Dick Kraus, David Pritchard and Donald George, the quartet who furnished the vocal chords and manipulated the life-giving threads.

Marionettes have always held a fascination for these eyes and all exhibits have spelled wondrous delight, but the perfection of production attained in the Tony Sarg unit of Saturday had not before been witnessed. Perhaps the real feature in this production was the excellence of the voices which accompanied the action, and in that of the title "role" there was a reminiscent resemblance to the nasal twang of the late Will Rogers.

About The Showshops

ALTHOUGH the current season of the living drama—and it has been one of the most distinguished in recent years—still has several fruitful weeks to run, the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington already are 'way up to here in plans for next year's subscription season at the National Theater.

NELSON B. BELL.

Among other new plays acquired by the Guild for next season's tentative list of productions is a new work by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein, entitled "The Stars Remain." This is the first drama the gifted brothers Epstein have undertaken for the stage. They have been encouraged in the effort, of course, by the success of the fables they have fashioned for the films.

Another play which the Guild has under consideration for next season is Martin Flud's "The King of the Mountains." Then there are, too, options on new stage pieces by Eugene O'Neill, Maxwell Anderson and John Wexley, which, if exercised, will add further luster to the subscription season of 1936-37.

It is highly probable that among the Guild's productions to be seen early next season at the National will be S. N. Behrman's "End of Summer," which has been running many weeks now in the Guild Theater, New York, with Ina Claire, Osgood Perkins, Minor Watson, Tom Powers and Doris Dudley in the pivotal roles. The return of Miss Claire to her native heath always is a signal for rejoicing on the part of Washington's faithful pew-holders.

Bess Davis Schreiner, managing director of the Washington subscription season, with offices in the second-floor lobby of the National Theater, reports that local subscribers are taking time by the forelock, to invent another clever phrase, by making their reservations now for next season. Reservations, incidentally, may be made by mail at any time, or in person at the office in the National any afternoon.

It is Mr. Edgar Jones, devoting his energies to the activities pursued by the night shift in the offices of the AAA, who calls up to point out that Washington should feel more than a casual passing interest in the appearance of Harry Ellerbe in an important role with Mme. Alla Nazimova in Ibsen's "Ghosts," at the National Theater, beginning tonight. Although Harry Ellerbe makes his home with a sister in Atlanta, Ga., his father, Mr. Alexander W. Ellerbe, is a resident of Washington employed in the Government Printing Office and living at 337 First street northeast. The talented young actor appearing with Nazimova, it may or may not be remembered, was cast on the screen in the role of Edward Bedford with Margaret Sullavan, Randolph Scott and Walter Connolly in "So Red the Rose," Paramount's picturization of the novel of the South by Stark Young.

The Warner Brothers have acquired the new motion picture theater to be erected at 6217 Georgia avenue northwest, by the Kass Realty Co. and ready for public dedication on or about August 15 of this year.

In making the announcement of this new acquisition, John J. Payette, general zone manager of Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, has this to say:

"I am happy to announce that we have added another modern theater to our group of neighborhood houses in the District. The new theater, which will be the fifteenth we operate locally, will be the only one we do not own outright, but all arrangements have been completed for a long-term lease from the Kass Realty Co., who will own the theater and the stores connected with it."

Standing between Rittenhouse and Sheridan streets on Georgia avenue, the new picture house has been named The Sheridan. It will be of the one-floor type, with a seating capacity of 1,000 and will reflect the most modern developments in theater design and construction. The front will be of marble, limestone and brick, and the lobby, 40 feet in width, will afford a luxurious approach to the auditorium proper. Lighting will be entirely indirect and there will not be a visible radiator in the building.

Ten stores will be constructed as a part of the theater project. Two of these will flank the playhouse and eight will be grouped in a "park and shop" arrangement set back from the property's frontage. Construction is to begin immediately.

Although his second performance of the afternoon gave scant indication of the fact, when Rudy Vallee arrived in the Capital Friday morning for a week of personal appearances with his "Punch Bowl Revue," at Loew's Fox, he was a very ill individual, running a fever and hardly able to use his voice. That old friend of the profession and savior of countless acts in the thrall of that ancient fetish of the theater, "the show must go on," Dr. Frank T. Shyne, was immediately summoned and, as he has done with Walter Hampden, Edmund Lowe, "Buddy" Rogers, Dave Apollon and scores of others, put Rudy on his feet in time for the first show and has kept him there ever since. The Vallee has not missed a performance and now is practically as fit as any of the fiddles in his band.

Dots and Dashes.

Rudy Vallee, by the way, is stopping at the Shoreham . . . He and his Connecticut Yankees opened the swanky hostelry five years ago, along with Harriet Hoctor, Amelia Earhart Putnam and many other celebrities . . . Arrived at 3 a. m., the plane having been turned back to Newark by bad weather . . . Remember? . . . John Considine, jr., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer, and Mrs. Considine, the former Carmen Pantages, arrive at the Shoreham Wednesday for a two-day visit with J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency . . . Meyer Davis, former Washington band and night club tycoon, will conduct his orchestra in person for the Lace Ball at the Shoreham next Monday night, to which we have graciously been bid by the thoughtful Ruth Barnard . . . Bert Granoff, popular local tenor, whose name is indelibly linked with the Earle Theater, is now hitting his high notes at the Palmer House in Chicago . . . Bert is soloing with Ted Weems' orchestra . . . On April 24 it was announced that Katharine Cornell would produce Maxwell Anderson's new play of "The Wingless Victory" next season . . . On April 25 she received the first order for seats for an opening night still many months away . . . That's about as "advanced" as any advance sale I know of . . . Today is Mother's Day at Variety Club . . . Nate Stiefel and Archie Engle are "kings for the day" . . . Every mother will be a queen . . . They all are, anyway.

Congregationalists To Hold Convention

Delegates from Congregational churches in New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia will open a three-day annual meeting Wednesday in the First Congregational Church.

Dr. Frederick W. Perkins, pastor of the National Memorial Universalist Church, will be guest speaker at the Wednesday night dinner meeting which opens the conference. Dr. George C. Vincent, of Montclair, N. J., chaplain, will be speaker at the 8 p. m. service to follow.

Thursday will be occupied with business sessions, reports of conference activities and other work of the churches. Dr. Dwight J. Bradley, of Andover-Newton Theological Seminary, will speak in the afternoon on "The Christian Message for Today." Separate dinners for laymen and laywomen will be given in the evening for discussions of home and foreign mission problems. Col. William O. Tufts, of Washington, will preside at the laymen's dinner.

Mrs. Doyle to Speak.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, will be guest speaker at Wilson College Day Thursday night at Wilson Teachers' College. She will speak on "My Hopes for the Schools of Washington." Her address will be a feature of an all-day program at the college to acquaint the public with activities there.

Lisa Gardiner Ballet Stages Spring Recital

Nicholoff Is Guest Artist in Annual Program at Roosevelt High.

Displaying again its particular flair for the interpretation of Spanish and Slavic rhythms, the Lisa Gardiner Ballet Saturday evening presented at Theodore Roosevelt High School its spring recital under the auspices of the Community Center Department before an enthusiastic audience of more than 600 persons.

Michael Nicholoff appeared as guest artist, teaming with Lisa Gardiner in three excellently executed routines, a mazurka to music of Delibes, an adagio interpolation in the "Dance of the Hours" (Ponchielli) ballet, and snatches of a Viennese waltz to music of the incomparable Strauss. Miss Gardiner also appeared solo in an interpretation of Lecuona's "Malaguena."

Yet the terpsichorean artistry of the masters did not bedim the worth of the accomplishments of the students, who revealed considerable talent in toe dancing and in the interpretation of national tempos.

The program of 20 items—divided into four sections—cannot be treated with any approximating deserving completeness, yet the seagull interpretation of Mary Day, the wild desert dance by Marjorie Beall, and Marjorie Magee's interpretation of Polka 1880 may be singled out as representing the higher points of individual accomplishment.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

The Burney Club gives its fourth annual concert Sunday afternoon in Barker Hall in co-operation with the music department of the Y. W. C. A. Emily Coville, soprano; John Marville, basso, and Sade Styron, pianist, present music by contempories of John Sebastian Bach. Program of arias by Bononcini, Hasse, A. Scarlatti, Telemann and Handel and music for harpsichord by Rameau, D. Scarlatti, Couperin and Kuhnau.

Devoted as an organization to the study and enjoyment of eighteenth-century music, the Burney Club yesterday followed its annual custom of inviting the public to share its preoccupation temporarily. It was a pleasant hour spent in the company of once illustrious men, some of whom have receded so far backward in the mists of time as to be barely discernible. The applause that once acclaimed Bononcini, Hasse, Telemann and Kuhnau comes to us now as a very faint echo indeed.

Miss Styron preceded each group of compositions with brief sketches of the composers represented, and her interesting remarks were illustrated with slides of old portraits and rare prints of the period. For the moment the figures of forgotten worthies were rehabilitated and stood forth in clear perspective, and the examples of their music showed how definitely one style of musical art predominated and made naught of international boundaries.

Mrs. Coville brought from obscurity arias from Bononcini's "Griselda" and Telemann's "Pimpinone," operas which are to most of us only names in catalogues, and the unfamiliar strains of Hasse's "Ritornerai fra poco" and Alesandro Scarlatti's "Sento de core." Mr. Marville, dealing with Handel alone, presented the seldom-heard "Vada a morir" from "Arminio," together with "Hear Me, Ye Winds and Waves," "Furbondo spira il vento" and "Where'er You Walk."

Miss Styron played three movements from Kuhnau's Biblical sonata, "David and Goliath," in which the beginnings of program music were exemplified. The naivete of the early attempts at realistic description were amusing, but no more so than the imitative sounds in the "Symphonia Domestica" of Richard Strauss. After all, music's purpose is not imitation, but suggestion. The other selections of harpischord numbers were a tambourin, a bandoline, and one of Domenico Scarlatti's capriccios.

Marian Chace and Michael Logan present a group of advanced students in the National Theater Sunday night, assisted by Lyman McCrary, pianist; Grace Powell, violist, and William Goodwin, barytone. Program of dances and pantomimes to music by Satie, Chopin, Musorgski, Franck, Couperin, Ravel, Glier, Soro, Brahms, Sibellus, Bach, and sundry unidentified composers.

In this succession of solos, pas de deux, and ensemble dances there was diversity of motives but a uniformity of modernism in the treatment. Not once was any aspect of the classical ballet as much as hinted at, and contemporary choreography had the stage to itself.

Some of the patterns had the beauty of rhythmic visualization of the interplay of musical themes. Particularly enjoyable were the "Design in Waltz Rhythm," the Bach toccata in F and the Invention No. 10, wherein "interpretation" of the music's meaning was put aside, and only its lovely weaving of lines brought into visible form.

One of Satie's "Gnossiennes" was danced by Miss Chace and Mr. Logan with the angularities which Ted Shawn first associated with those Spartan dances. It is not quite clear to me how the Egyptian one-dimensional figures came to be found in Sparta, but the movements do fit the rhythm of the music.

The relation between music and the dance, insofar as it concerns the treatment of certain compositions not conceived for the dance, is the outcome of the dancer's personal feeling for the choreographic possibilities of the composition, and this feeling may be quite at variance with that of the spectator. I found myself disagreeing completely with the treatment of Ravel's "La Valse" and "Les Barricades Mysterieuses" of Couperin.

An interested audience accorded the dancers generous applause, and seemed to enjoy especially the antics of the "Puppets" and the pantomimic satire on the Supreme Court entitled "Nine Earnest Men."

Another New Addition to Warner Chain

Architect's drawing of the front elevation of the new Sheridan Theater, latest link in the chain of Warner Brothers' motion picture theaters in and about the National Capital. The Sheridan will occupy the site at 6217 Georgia avenue, on the east side of that thoroughfare between Rittenhouse and Sheridan streets northwest. The new playhouse, which is expected to be ready for public dedication about August 15, will be of the one-floor type and will have a seating capacity of 1,000 in an auditorium 135 feet deep and 85 feet wide.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, May 3.

THE STORY BEHIND THE SONG. The song, "A Pretty Girl IS Like a Melody," supplied "The Great Ziegfeld," with the most beautiful and spectacular musical number ever done on the screen. Although first written in 1919, "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," is one of the the leading popular songs.

BERLIN.

It is interesting to learn how the song was presented in the "Follies" by Ziegfeld, and then contrast that with the presentation in the flicker about Ziegfeld.

Irving Berlin told me the story. He had a contract with Ziggy to write the first act of the "1919 Follies." He wrote four songs, among them "Mandy," and believed he had a couple of song hits. Ziegfeld asked Berlin if he would write another number, a little song to introduce five show girls in the second act.

Berlin looked at the costume drawings, for this was all any one connected with the show knew about the number. Each costume plate had a drawing of a girl representing a melody. They were to parade across the stage, "glorifying the American girl," as the orchestra played a bit of Schubert's serenade, Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," and other classics. However, in order to introduce the girls and melodies, John Steele had to sing a few words. The few words that Irving Berlin wrote for Steele to sing were, "A Pretty Girl is Like a Melody."

It was four days before the "Follies" opened in Atlantic City that Ned Wayburn staged the "Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" number. It was after the entire picture, "The Great Ziegfeld," had been completed and previewed that Seymour Felix staged the "Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" number.

Contrast the big way it was done in the flicker with the simple way it was staged in the "Follies."

It was put on almost "in one" in the "Follies." This was not deliberate or planned by Ziegfeld. It was done in this fashion because no scenery had been ordered for it; and because it was not considered a big production number.

The stage set consisted of a black velvet curtain and an upright piano. Mary Washburn played "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" on the piano as John Steele sang. After this, the five show girls paraded and the orchestra played the classical pieces.

From this simple presentation in the "Follies," the song, "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," blossomed into a number which cost more to put on the screen than the entire "Follies of 1919" did.

Kaufman has a lobby encounter. When George S. Kaufman was in Hollywood, he resided at the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel. Many mornings Kaufman would sit in the lobby of the hotel. And on these mornings a noted stage producer, making a flicker, would pass by. Kaufman would begin a conversation with him, but the producer always said: "I'm sorry, I can't stop. I have to be at the studio by 9 o'clock. I'm making a motion picture."

The picture was released and Kaufman said: "I finally saw the picture and I wonder if it would have made much difference if he was half an hour late every day."

A Few Words About "Under Two Flags."

This picture contains some of the most beautiful and impressive scenes ever photographed. The opening shot of the flicker, which establishes the mood and the locale, shows a vast expanse of the desert and a long caravan of camels. Look carefully at this scene, for it demonstrates the wonders that can be done with camera and celluloid. On the screen, hundreds of camles can be seen, yet only 17 camels were used.

Di Maggio Gets Triple, Two Singles in Six Trips to Plate.

Chapman Enjoys Field at Bat; St. Louis Defeated, 14-5.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3 (AP).—Joe Di Maggio, rookie outfielder making his big league debut, and Ben Chapman, veteran outfielder, stole the show today as the New York Yankees belted out a 14-5 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

Chapman gathered a triple, double and two singles in four times at bat to drive in five runs, while Di Maggio got a triple and two singles in six times at bat and scored three runs.

The Browns treated Lefty Gomez roughly, batting the yankee ace out of the box in the fifth. Four Browns' pitchers gave up a total of 17 hits. Pepper hit a homer for the Browns.

Cards Down Bees For Sixth Straight

St. Louis, May 3 (AP).—Led by Manager Frankie Frisch, the league-pacing St. Louis Cardinals turned back the Boston Bees, 6 to 2, today for their sixth straight triumph in the opener of a three-game series played under lowering skies before 7,500 Sunday fans.

Frisch, in a perfect day at bat, collected three of ten Cardinal hits with two singles and a double. Bill Hallahan and Rookie Jim Winford were touched for a total of nine hits, but perfect fielding support helped them limit the Bees to two runs.

Bobby Brown, starting Boston hurler, was knocked from the box in a three-run St. Louis onslaught in the first inning, and Bob Reis went the rest of the route.

The Boston runs in the seventh, ending 24 scoreless innings, came on singles by Al Lopez and Reis after Hallahan had walked Rupert Thompson and Joe Coscarart. Winford then replaced Hallahan, and a double play cut off the brief Boston rally.

Ferrell Checks Detroit With Two Hits

Two Singles by Goslin Mar Performance; Homer for Foxx.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 3.—The high-riding Boston Red Sox, paced by the Ferrell brothers combination of Pitcher Wes and Catcher Rick, shut out the World Champion Detroit Tigers, 6 to 0, in the rain here today.

The two-hit game gave Wes Ferrell his third victory of the season against one defeat. Brother Rick, the American League's leading batter, blasted the ball over the left-field fence in the second inning for a home run, as well as a double later in the game, which accounted for another run.

Jimmy Foxx, big first baseman of the league leaders, tallied his sixth home run of the year when he lifted the ball over the leftfield fence with one on and none out in the fifth.

The only Tiger able to touch Ferrell's hurling was Leftfielder Goose Goslin. Twice he singled and twice he died on first. Billy Rogell was the only Detroit player to reach second. He traveled to the initial sack on an error by Foxx and went down to second when Ferrell threw one wide.

Phils Beat Cubs, 8 to 5, in Twelfth

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 3.—After pitching three good relief innings, Mike Kowalik, young Chicago right-hander, weakened in the twelfth today and the Philadelphia Phillies ganged on him for four hits and three runs to take the opening game of the series from the Cubs, 8 to 5.

Lee Norris, rookie shortstop, hit a home run, with two on, off Lon Warneke in the sixth to give the Phillies a 4-to-3 lead after Ken O'Dea, young catcher, had started the Cubs off in front with a two-run homer off Curt Davis in the third, but the Cubs tide it up on Frank Demaree's triple after a pass in the seventh.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

A Cleveland baseball writer in the press box at Griffith Stadium yesterday was asked why Pete Appleton, who has won three straight for the Nats, was a flop as a pitcher for Cleveland . . . "The only reason he flopped," was the reply, "was because he just couldn't get anybody out" . . . We shall see this afternoon when Appleton goes to the mound against his former mates . . . Appleton has a lot of former mates in the American League, including the Indians, the Yankees and the Red Sox . . . but he claims the Tigers as cousins after that two-hit performance against 'em last week . . . in his last 27 innings of pitching, Appleton has allowed only 14 hits and represents the Nats' best $7,500 investment since they bought Joe Cronin at that figure.

POVICH.

Bold Venture's victory in the Kentucky Derby was very well received by Admiral Cary T. Grayson . . . who owns an interest in the horse . . . which ran under Grayson's name for a period on the New York tracks last summer . . . Mary Hirsch, daughter of Maxie Hirsch, who trained the Derby winner for Owner Mortimer Schwartz, also is entitled to take a bow as a result of what happened . . . It was she who first recognized the talents of Jockey Ira Hanford, who rode the winner . . . Miss Hirsch, who last year was the only licensed woman trainer in the Nation, hold the contract on Hanford's riding services . . . her brother, Buddy Hirsch, is also a trainer.

Joe DiMaggio broke into the big leagues impressively when he socked a triple and two singles in his first appearance with the Yankees yesterday . . . but he is still shy of the record of Earl Averill, who slammed a home run in his debut with the Cleveland Indians . . . An outfielder named Taylor smacked a homer in his first time at bat for Washington a few years ago and two weeks later was out of the league . . . Tom Zachary, who shut the Athletics out, 2 to 0, in his first game for Washington, was the same Zach Walton who had quit the A's in 1918 to join the Army without any explanation to Manager Connie Mack.

World Featherweight Champion Freddie Miller, who meets Petey Sarron here for the title on May 11, started out in life as an apprentice baker in Cincinnati . . . between rounds of every fight, his seconds apply ice packs above his eyes to lessen the chances of injury . . . Miller claims the ice packs prevent the blood from rushing to the bruised spots which otherwise would bleed freely . . . his trick method of bandaging his hands which leaves the knuckles bare, required an hour's work on the part of his seconds . . . A portion of Pete Sarron's earnings is sent regularly to Dave Evans, Birmingham Boys Club superintendent, who first discovered his talents . . . Evans then pays regular salaries to the numerous Birmingham dependents among Sarron's relatives . . . Sarron won more than $5,000 betting the races at Hialeah Park last winter.

Yesterday's defeat of the Nats was met with mixed emotions by Radio Broadcaster Arch McDonald, an incurable supporter of the Nats . . . when the Nats won the second game of their four-game winning streak, McDonald accepted a $25 wager that forbade him to eat solid foods until the Nats lost.....for 72 hours he subsisted on liquids and was willing to continue his diet if the rain would cease yesterday and permit the game to go on.

The most ultra-exclusive sports event in the history of Washington is the Chevy Chase Club Invitation Doubles tournament . . . from which the public is barred, and only invited guests of members eligible to attend . . . even newspaper photographers are about as welcome as Il Duce in Addis Ababa . . . Davis Cup bigwigs are now considering a change in the U. S. doubles team . . . on the well-defined suspicion that Allison "carries" Van Ryn when they play as a team and that Budge "carries" Mako, there is talk of tossing Allison and Budge together as a doubles pair . . . with American doubles teams having lost to Germany and England in the last two years, the Davis Cup folks are slightly panicky on the subject.

Earl Whitehill is often referred to as the aging left-hander of the Washington club, but Lefty Grove is a month older . . . both were 36 early this year . . . Whitehill started pitching for the Tigers a year before Grove started with the A's . . . Connie Mack, who purchased Grove for $106,000, paid the Baltimore club off at the rate of $25,000 per year . . . and United States Income Tax Bureau reports for the year 1920 show that the Yankees did not pay $125,000 to Boston for Babe Ruth, as commonly reported . . . the price was $110,000.

Miller and Sarron Workouts To Be Broadcast, Blow by Blow

Something new in sports broadcasting will be started this afternoon when a series of 15-minute programs is scheduled from the training camps of Champion Freddie Miller and Challenger Pete Sarron, who will clash for the featherweight title here May 11.

Blow-by-blow descriptions of the workouts of both the defending champion and his future antagonist will be given direct from the Humidor Gymnasium, 1121 Fourteenth street northwest, over Station WJSV. The microphone will be handled in the gym by Ye Olde Pyne Tree, Arch McDonald, and Ye Olde Ringworme, Bill McCormick, of The Post's Sports Staff.

Today the program is scheduled to begin at 1:15 p. m., at which time a description of the highlights of Sarron's workout will be given. Tuesday, the work of Champion Freddie Miller will be aired at 2:15 p. m. Wednesday, the microphone will pick up Sarron's 1:15 workout and Thursday again switch back to Miller at 2:15.

It is hardly possible that either fighter will work Friday, but a program will be scheduled from the gymnasium at 1:15, when a few surprises will be dug up for the listeners.

Boxing Body May Join N.B.A.

D. C. Commission Will Consider Question on Friday.

Alignment With National Group Protection to All Concerned.

By Bill McCormick.

The most important step in the the legalization of boxing in the District will be taken next Friday when the Boxing Commission will consider the question of becoming a member of the National Boxing Association.

It is probable the commission will vote to align with the powerful organization to afford more complete protection to all concerned—including the public—in the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron featherweight title bout to be held at Griffith Stadium next Monday night.

The first title bout between Miller and Sarron, held in Miami last March, was followed by charges and counter-charges of fixing, phenagling, fouls, etc. The dispute over the outcome made the fight desirable for Washington, but the commission is very anxious that the issue be settled fairly once and for all here.

Suspension Meaningless.

At present, since the local commission has no working agreement with any other group, a suspension here means practically nothing as it allows barred fighters to perform elsewhere. If the District joins the National Boxing Association, a suspension in the Capital automatically would bar the fighter being disciplined in 30 States, Mexico, Cuba, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Province of Quebec, City of Montreal and City of Miami Beach.

The N. B. A. also has working agreements with England, Italy, Canada, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. New York, Pennsylvania and California do not cooperate with the association.

At the time boxing was legalized here the District Commission was invited to join the N. B. A., but the matter was held in abeyance until the game could get well under way.

Meeting Friday.

Friday afternoon at 4, the commission will call a meeting at which both principals to the Miller-Sarron feud, referees, judges and other officials and the press will be present. The commission then will instruct the fighters in the rules and literally "lay down the law." Miller and Sarron will be warned that no unfair tactics whatsoever will be tolerated and that severe punishment will be meted out to the fighter violating the rules and regulations.

Then, to give added force to the edict, it probably will be announced that the commission has affiliated with the National Boxing Association and that any disciplinary action taken will be recognized by those affiliated with the organization.

Jockey Brawl Is Held Way to Decide Derby

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 3.—Getting away from the Derby—some Derby afternoon in the future—a truck will back up to the jockeys' room at Churchill Downs. Men will unload shotguns, knives, brass knuckles and baseball bats. These will be distributed to the jockeys scheduled to ride in the big race. A track official will blow a whistle to start the battle. No holds will be barred. The boys will be allowed to use their fists, their feet and their teeth and it also will be fair for any boy to throw a body when they begin lying around. When a winner has been declared in this "battle royal," the number of the boy's mount in the Derby will be hung in the winner's slot and the mutuel department will display the winning mutuel.

Then the boys will wash up, don their silks, repair to the paddock and then go to the track to show the crowd of 60,000 which horse might have been the winner had not the jockey fight been the deciding factor.

I'll agree that all this is absurd, but I'm trying to make it serve a purpose.

Turf Will Suffer.

The knock-down-and-drag-out tactics of recent big races must cease or the turf is going to suffer. People are tiring of traveling in some cases hundreds of miles to see classics decided by a disregard for racing rules. I'm not condemning the Derby or pointing a finger at Ira Hanford, Bold Venture's jockey, or any certain rider in the race.

Since Don Meade and H. W. Fischer whipped each other instead of their mounts in the 1932 Derby finish there has been epidemic of rough, tough, every-man-for-himself riding in big races. Fouling that would bring instant disqualification in the sixth race at Charles Town is passed off as "racing luck," when the purse and importance of the race reaches certain proportions.

Don't get me wrong. I am not in favor of jockeys using lipstick either. We are entitled to courageous, hard-riding boys. But when the action appears to be deliberate and in some cases premeditated it is high time that something should be done about it. And I do not mean a 15-day suspension, which is nothing more than a chance for the jockey to celebrate should he be the winner.

"Judge Landis" Needed.

It all simmers down to racing's need for a "Judge Landis." Former Vice President Charles Curtis was about to take the job when death erased him. There would be other work in racing for him, but most important, in my mind, would be ironing the kinks out of the Derby, the Santa Anita Handicap, the Narragansett Special and other important stakes.

Starting stalls, camera finishes, electric timers and other recently adopted appliances have served to protect the public. What we need is three robust stewards, ready to recite the penalties for rule infractions—iron men who know not the size of the crowd, the mount of the purse, or the owners of the various horses.

Saito Invites Golfer as a Good-Will Ambassador.

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., May 3.—Bobby Jones, former grand slam champion of golf, has been invited by Hiroshi Saito, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, to visit Japan as an ambassador of good will.

In a letter, Saito said: "Convey to Mr. Robert T. Jones our wish and the wish of all Japanese golfers to having the chance of extending to him a royal welcome in Japan.

"His visit will not only enhance the standard of Japanese golfdom, but will surely contribute to the international friendship between our two peoples."

Ninth-Inning Rally Wins for Chicago

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 3.—A five-run uprising in the ninth inning, climaxed by Zeke Bonura's homer into the leftfield stands, gave the Chicago White Sox an 8-to-4 victory over the Athletics today before 12,000 fans.

"Dusty" Rhodes had a 4-to-3 victory in his grasp going into the final inning, having given but six hits up to that time. Sewell and Radcliff, who batted for Brown, scratched safeties and Kreevich beat out a perfect bunt down the third-base line. Stump's fly to left and Haas' single scored two runs. Bonura then clouted his four-badger and the game was in the bag.

Piet also hit a homer for Chicago. Six of the White Sox hits were for extra bases.

Baltimore Postman Captures District A.A.U. Marathon Crown

Miller Goes Distance in 1:36:52

Half-Mile State Record-Holder Leads 27 to Finish Line.

By George Considine.

Bearing out the bromide anent a letter carrier's Sabbath activity, Charlie Miller, 23-year-old Baltimore postman, outran a field of 46 starters yesterday in Potomac Park to win the annual D. C. A. A. U. 15-mile championship. He succeeds as champion Bill Agee, his illustrious fellow-townsman, who retired at the 8½-mile mark.

The Maryland State half-mile record holder, representing the Stonewall A. C., finished the grind in 1 hour 36 minutes and 52 3-5 seconds—a time which the A. A. U. officials considered exceptionally fast in view of the sultry weather conditions and the heavy Sunday traffic.

The D. C. A. A. U. trophy to the first Washington finisher went to youthful Louis Mitchell, of the Southeast Businessmen's A. C., who broke the tape in ninth place with a time of 1 hour 49 minutes and 47 seconds. It was the second race of Mitchell's career, he having placed eighth in the recent Easterwood Democratic run in Baltimore.

Dewhurst Tenth.

Not quite two minutes back of Mitchell came Arthur Dewhurst, of the Y. M. C. A., in tenth place while third honors locally were taken by George Shorb, of Washington Track and Field Club, who finished eleventh in 1 hour 53 minutes 3 seconds. It was the first time in the history of the run that the first three local men finished consecutively.

Pacing Miller, stride for stride, and closing in fast in the last 200 yards, was Charlie Carnegie, stringbean Philadelphian, running for the Nativity A. C., who finished ahead of Bill Wilson, of the Passon A. A. of Philadelphia. Their times were 1 hour, 37 minutes, 58 seconds and 1 hour, 41 minutes, 1 second, respectively.

The Passon A. A. accumulated a minimum of 13 points to win the Occidental Team Trophy. Runner-up honors went to Baltimore Cross Country with 17 points, the Stonewall A. C. piled up 21 points and Washington Track and Field ran fourth with 27 points.

Heat Terrific.

For a while soon after the start it appeared that the field would eliminate itself entirely, so frequently were the marathoners forced to quit because of the heat. Long before the leaders had jogged off 5 miles, eight contestants had given up the struggle.

George Martak, of Baltimore Cross Country, who finished fourth, started off in whirlwind fashion. Setting a blistering pace, he crossed the 5-mile point in the excellent time of 30 minutes and 5 seconds.

Running a good 175 yards behind Martak was Miller, who selected the 8-mile mark to increase his pace and take the lead which he never relinquished thereafter. Miller completed 10 miles in 1 hour 3 minutes and 12 seconds.

1. Charlie Miller, Stonewall A. C., 1:36:52 3-5.
2. Charlie Carnegie, Nativity A. C., 1:37:58.
3. Bill Wilson, Passon A. A., 1:41:01.
4. George Martak, Baltimore C. C., 1:43:03.
5. John Beares, Baltimore C. C., 1:44:38.
6. George Leiberman, Passon A. A., 1:45:31.
7. Henry Corr, Nativity A. C., 1:45:52.
8. Charles Otera, Passon A. A., 1:48:20.
9. Louis Mitchell, Southeast Businessmen A. C., 1:49:47.
10. Arthur Dewhurst, Washington Y. M. C. A., 1:51:26.
11. George Shorb, Washington Track and Field Club, 1:53:03.
12. Don Heinicke, Hanlon A. C., 1:55:45.
13. John Merson, Stonewall A. C., 1:57:31.
14. James Garrick, Southeast Businessmen A. C., 1:58:30.
15. John Peck, Washington Track and Field Club, 1:59:22.
16-21. Gene Newton, Baltimore C. C., 2:00:14; El Martak, Baltimore C. C., 2:00:28; Ray Welneich, Baltimore C. C., 2:00:34; Wilson Rich, Baltimore C. C., 2:02:34; James Hill, Bureau of Investigation, 2:06:30; Geoffe Geratemayer, German-American A. C., 2:06:36.
22-27. Bus Nicholson, Washington Track and Field Club, 2:08:06; Clifton Herz, Stonewall A. C., 2:09:26; Carl Anderson, Stonewall A. C., 2:15:00; James Lowman, Baltimore C. C., 2:21:10; Wayne Souder, unattached, 2:22:30; Jimmy Montague, Washington Track and Field Club, 2:25:00.

District Police Score Over Annapolis by 6-5

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 3.—The Washington Police baseball team defeated the Annapolis semipro nine in a hard fought game here this afternoon, 6 to 5. The blue coats hopped on Earl Mattingly in the second inning to pile up four runs and hold the lead to the end. Annapolis got one runner home in the fourth but the eighth proved the big inning when four runs were scored.

All of this while, the Nats were being frustrated by the combined pitching of Blaeholder and the super-defensive play of the Cleveland infield. Three double plays in the second, third and fourth innings nullified the three hits that Blaeholder allowed.

Stone singled with one out in the second and Powell walked, but Knickerbocker started a double play on Kuhel's grounder. Newsom singled to center with one out in the third and Hughes started a double play on Miles' grounder. Buddy Lewis beat out a bunt to start the fourth and was a double-play victim when Myer slammed a line drive at Hughes.

Prince Georges Downs Hillcrest

Redmon Wins A.C.'s Fifth Game by 14-5 Score.

The Prince Georges A. C. won its fifth victory in seven starts yesterday by trouncing Hillcrest Pharmacy, 14 to 5, on the Bladensburg road diamond. Johnny Redmon, Prince Georges' pitcher, allowed but five hits and fanned nine men. Blardmore, the losing pitcher, was a trifle wild, walking nine men.

Artie Dove, of the winners, connected for a home run in the third inning with two on and Larry Finn, also of Prince Georges, duplicated the feat in the eighth with one on base. The Prince Georges club will play Old Manhattan Beer teams Saturday at 3 p. m., and on Sunday will complete a three-game test in two days, meeting Landover at 1 p. m. and Riverdale at 3:30 p. m. in a double-header.

Bike Eliminations Scheduled Sunday

Preliminary eliminations, which will eventuate in the selection of the American Olympic bicycle team, will be held next Sunday on the Memorial boulevard, Milton H. Sencindiver, Washington representative of the Amateur Bicycle League of America, announced yesterday.

Hardly had the announcement been made when 25 entries for the 100 kilometer grind (62½ miles) were received. The itinerary, starting at a point 500 feet east of the Memorial Bridge, will consist of a run to Mount Vernon, back to the bridge and finally back to Mount Vernon.

Twenty per cent of the finishers will be sent to Newark to compete in the sectional trials, there being eight other sections holding similar trials. A quartet is to be selected from each section and the 36 riders will congregate in Washington in July for the final tryouts.

Weather Spoils Sandlotters' Program

Rain Halts National City League Games; Two Innings Is Limit.

Rain did a complete job the opening day of the National City Baseball League yesterday, drowning out eight ball games. None of them went more than two innings.

However, the Dixie Pigs made the most of the small period of playable weather, running up four runs in the first inning of their game at Riverdale, Md., with the highly touted Blue Flame Valets, city Sunday champions of the Washington Sandlot Association.

Dixie Pig followers were of the opinion the rain came as a decided break for the Blue Flames who, they aver, were headed for a neat trouncing. The score was 4 to 1 when the game was called in the second. Frank Di Nenna was pitching for the Blue Flames and Lefty Joe Sullivan for the Pigs.

On the East Ellipse, the veteran Union Printers got off to a 1-0 lead against the strong Shady Grove Barbecues before the rain caused a halt.

It also rained as far South as Potomac Park (Diamond No. 9) where the Woodmen of the World Elm Camp was supposed to meet Miller Furniture in a nine-inning ball game. Two-ninths of the contest was played at the end of which Elm Camp had a 1-0 lead. Charlie Booker hurled the two-inning shut-out with Carl Wahler tossing 'em in for the Furniture people.

The Heurich Brewer-Plaza Wine & Liquor Co. fracas was also rained out as were all the games in Section "B."

Early Tied for First In Cummings Tourney

Southern Pines, N. C., May 3 (AP).—Judge H. B. O'Sullivan, New Haven, Conn.; Archibald McNeil, Bridgeport, Conn., and Stephen Early, secretary to President Roosevelt, tied for first place in Attorney General Homer S. Cummings' consolation golf tournament today with 87s.

Robert Jackson, Washington, was three strokes behind with a 90. The Attorney General improved his game with consistent putting and was next with a 98. Gene Tunney, the former heavyweight champion, who was among the first ten finishers in yesterday's 18-hole tournament, did not play.

National City Juniors Map Plans for Season

The National City Junior Baseball League, numbering eight teams, has completed plans for the start of the season. High school stars are already slated for most of the line-ups.

The following teams are entered: The Pep Boys, George's Radio Shop, Police Boys Club, Clarendon Juniors, New Deal Men's Shop, Simpson's Pharmacy, J. C. Flood Plumbing Co. and Washington Boys Club. The league will open June 7.

Furious Battle Seen for Bout At Garden

By the United Press.

New York, May 3.—Two of the prize ring's gamest veterans, Tony Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarnin, will test their fistic abilities against each other for the first time under the floodlights of Madison Square Garden next Friday night.

One of them, the loser, is heading for "the last roundup" as far as further championship ring activity is concerned. Pound-for-pound they are the two of the deadliest punchers the fighting game has ever known, and none expects the bout to go the scheduled 10 rounds.

Canzoneri, squat and bull-shouldered, will not be risking his lightweight title, but he is so sure he can drop McLarnin, former welter champion, that he is going to spot the Irishman an 8 to 10 pound weight advantage. McLarnin probably will enter the ring a slight favorite, however, with the odds tightly drawn, and most of the betting on a knockout being scored by one or the other.

Match a "Natural."

The match, a "natural" for the promoters and a "honey" for the spectators will gross over $100,000 if expectations of a capacity house of 18,000 are fulfilled.

The little Italian has the edge on the "baby-faced" as far as training goes. Tony has fought ten times, including a title defense against Al Roth, since winning the title in an elimination series against Lou Ambers last May 10. In five fights since the first of the year, Canzoneri has knocked out four opponents, the rubber-legged Johnny Jadick being the only one to stay ten rounds with the champion.

Since losing the welter title to Barney Ross nearly a year ago, McLarnin has been idle. He is a clean liver, however, and should make out all right.

Both on the Wane.

Both fighters are on the wane. They have lived to the ripe ring ages of 30 for Canzoneri and 29 for McLarnin and their legs and wind are not what they once were. But their stout hearts have not weakened and both can still stand toe-to-toe and slug.

Canzoneri supporters believe that if Tony gets past the second round he will "plant" the Irishman. They frankly believe Jimmy is through and that unless he uncorks a haymaker early in the match, Canzoneri will fight him off his feet.

In the 11 years' campaigning Tony held three titles, feather weight, lightweight and junior welterweight, while the best that Jimmy could do was the welter in a dozen years of fighting. But, giving Jimmy due credit, he whipped nine champions—from flyweight to welterweight—in "over-the-weight" matches.

In addition to being McLarnin's first fighting since losing the title, it will be his initial start since marrying the former Lilian Cupit, of Vancouver. She will be right at the ringside urging him on.

Bill Terry Boosts Mark; Tops Hitters

Bill Terry got a hit in one trip to the plate against the Reds yesterday and boosted his batting average to .538 to give him an even 100 percentage point lead over his nearest rival. Rock Ferrell, of the Boston Red Sox, in the Big Six batting standing. Ben Chapman, batting star of the Yankees in their win over the Browns, slid into third place with an average of .432, 12 percentage points ahead of Bill Herman, of Chicago.

Grant Assured Spot on Davis Cup Team

Tennis Officials Finally Decide Atlantan Is Worthy of Berth.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Bitsy Grant hasn't been told yet but the United States Lawn Tennis Association has finally decided that the mighty little atom is good enough to represent this country in international matches.

With the Chevy Chase Club more or less a council room for U. S. L. T. A. officials over the week-end, it was learned that Grant is certain to be sent abroad this summer as a member of the U. S. L. T. A. squad. The feeling is strong among certain members of the Davis Cup selection committee that Bitsy is due for a starting singles assignment.

But whether or not the United States defeats Australia in the Davis Cup tie at Philadelphia, Grant, for years ignored by the U. S. L. T. A., will still represent this country at Wimbledon. The Atlantan's four victories in five matches with Donald Budge in the past few months on every kind of surface has swung certain members of the committee to his support.

Grant's supporters on the committee recently brought the matter to a head. Backers of Budge and Gene Mako as the logical Cup doubles team were taking their stand on the record of the youngsters as compared with that of Allison and Van Ryn.

Those supporting Grant took advantage of the opportunity to direct the committee to use the same logic in consdiering Grant, especially in view of the fact that he has beaten Budge on grass as well as clay, whereas the doubles victories of Budge and Mako have been solely on clay.

While this was being decided, Grant spent his time at the club watching the matches and imbibing soft drinks. A badly blistered right foot prevented him from playing. Few people recognized the rather inconspicuous little fellow, garbed in a bluish suit and towering with his 5 feet 4 inches little higher than a tennis net.

The move to assure him a place on the American team going abroad brings an end to the long period the U. S. L. T. A. has given Grant the go-by. In view of Davis Cup developments of recent years, the committee's decision to make use of the Little Giant Killer comes none too soon.

Hecht Rallies to Upset Kann's, 9-7; Palais Royal Wins, 16 to 7

The Hecht Co. pulled an upset right off the bat yesterday to start off the sixth season of the Department Store League. Scoring four runs in the eighth inning the Hechtmen rallied to defeat the S. Kann Sons Co., 1935 champions, 9 to 7, on the East Ellipse.

In the other Department Store League game of the Washington Post Sandlot Association, Palais Royal outslugged the Lansburgh club to take a 16-7 victory on the South Ellipse.

With some 1,000 fans looking on at the Sunday morning battle, Hecht's took a 2-0 lead in the first inning and added two more in the fourth as Manager-Pitcher Paul Messink pitched no-hit ball. Kann's exploded suddenly in the fifth, however, with four runs including a home run by Charlie Mahaney with one on base.

Kann's took a comfortable lead in the seventh when Stewart connected for a homer with two on base and the champions had a 7-4 lead. Hecht's got back one in the seventh and then proceeded to win the ball game in the next.

Hershey Hersberger led off with a single and Reds McMenamin and Johnny Mahaney likewise singled. "Stuff" Howard tied the score with the fourth hit of the frame but Messick and McInerey made it two outs. Then Pete English came through with the single driving in the winning run and one for good measure.

The fielding of Johnny Maheny for Hecht's was a feature. The left-fielder dragged down six running catches, two of them of the down-right spectacular variety.

No less than seven pitchers paraded to and from the mound in the Lansburgh-Palais Royal game. Palais Royal fell on Lafty Sanford, Jim Hiser, Williams and Joe Hartman for 13 hits.

2 Features to End Indoor Mat Season

The local indoor wrestling season will close next Thursday at Turner's Arena with a double feature, it was announced yesterday. Jim McMillan, former Illinois football star, takes on Doc Len Hall and Yvon Robert, Canadian blacksmith, tangles with Wild Charlie Strack.

Returning after an absence of three years, McMillan will be remembered as one of those who revolutionized wrestling into something akin to football. In 1931 and 1932 his local wrestling appearances attracted larger houses than the then world champion, Jim Londos.

In a pair of preliminaries limited to 30 minutes each Sailor Billings will meet Laverne Baxter and Olaf Olson entertains Jim Wallis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 3.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation Baseball Club defeated the Blue Sox here this afternoon, 8 to 0, on a moist diamond. A three-bagger by Cauliflower and two-baggers by Russell, both of Washington, and Kilmer and Wilson, of the Blue Sox, featured the hitting. There were also three sparkling double plays. Nickels, of Washington, fanned nine. Batteries were: Washington, Nickels and Xander; Blue Sox, Butts and Little.

Premiers Win, 25-3.

Scoring in every inning except one, the Premiers played rings around the Orioles yesterday on the Premier diamond, winning by a score of 25 to 3. Shortstop Levine, of the winners, captured individual honors with 4 hits in as many trips to the plate.

Novelty Leading, 1-0.

National Novelty was leading D. G. S. by a score of 1 to 0 at the end of the third inning of a National City League, B section, baseball game on the Fairlawn diamond yesterday when activity was suspended because of rain.

Invitation Play Entries Close Tonight

$5 Fee Holding Down Number to Compete at Chevy Chase.

Although the tournament will not start until May 13, entries for the historic Chevy Chase Invitation Golf Tournament are scheduled to close tonight.

Entries, according to the letter sent District clubs, must be in the hands of the golf committee by 6 p. m.

From the Chevy Chase Club came the announcement that few entries had been received. All of which indicates that the $5 entry fee, which is being assessed participants for the first time in the 27 years of the competition, is proving the stumbling block.

The course will be open for practice rounds next Monday and Tuesday, and the 18-hole qualifying round, heretofore held two days, will begin Wednesday, to be followed by two rounds of match play Thursday, May 14, and the semifinals and finals Friday.

Hickman Greene of Manor, will defend his title, and Billy Dettweiler, of Congressional, runner-up, will be back for another whack at it. All of Washington's better known players including District Champion Roger Peacock, of Congressional; Harry Pitt, of Manor; Levi Yoder, of Kenwood, will participate.

Due to the entry fee only a limited field is expected. The committee probably will be satisfied with a field of 100 provided all of the top-notchers enter.

Washington's second invitation tournament of the season will be held May 27-28-29 at Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

Zohner Wins Race.

Lebanon, Pa., May 3 (AP).—Jimmy Zohner, of Reading, won the 25-lap feature event of an automobile racing program today on the half-mile dirt track at the Lebanon County fairgrounds. Mark Light, Lebanon, was second. Zohner's time was 12:26 2-5. Walt Bosley, Baltimore, won one of the ten-lap events in 5:26.

Scott-Fine Battle to Decide Status of Two Aspirants to Title

Both Seeking Canzoneri Match

A lightweight battle that will decide the status of two young men who seem headed for the top is on at Turner's arena tonight when British Lightweight Champion Davey Fine meets District Lightweight Champion Howard Scott in a bout scheduled for 10 rounds.

Fine has made his mark in his own country and is in the United States trying to work his way up to a title contest with Tony Canzoneri. Scott is rapidly making his mark here and a victory over Fine will advance him many notches toward his objective, which is the same as Davey's.

Fine climaxed his English career by soundly trouncing Jackie (Kid) Berg, perhaps the best lightweight ever turned out in the British Isles. Scott has pounded his way toward the top by trimming such as California Joe Rivers, Lew Massey and Norment Quarles. Scott dropped a much disputed decision to Eddie Cool in another recent bout.

Fine is being steered through the difficult channels of the fistic seas by Billy McCarney, one of the best-known managers in the world, who has handled such stars as Luther McCarthy, Max Schmeling and Washington's own Natie Brown.

Since the days when he took Frankie Genaro on a European tour—and, incidentally, helped discover Primo Carnera—McCarney has been seeking a foreign importation of worth. In Fine he believes he has the right man.

What promises to be one of the best supporting cards since the opening of the Turner Arena will bolster the main event. In a six-round semi-final Young Raspi, of Baltimore, will meet Irish Johnny Dean in a re-match. Dean, a perennial show-stealer, was held to a draw in a previous encounter with the Baltimorean.

Bobby Dechter, clever Philadelphia lightweight, will meet Nick Camaretta, a rugged individual from New Orleans, in another six-round bout, while Joey Temes, the Greek bulldog, will return to the wars in yet another six against Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore.

Post Predictions.

Main event—Davey Fine, lightweight champion of the British Isles, vs. Howard Scott, lightweight champion of the District, 10 rounds. Rated C. Fine is one of the most rugged and rough fighters to reach here from the other side in many years. Unlike most British boxers, he is not a hit-and-runner, but fights much on the style of another great British fistic-muffian of Jewish extraction—Jackie (Kid) Berg. His tearing-in style will make Scott step high, wide and handsome and the resulting carnage should be well worth watching; however, Scott is in a winning streak and probably hasn't shown his best form, but one more very impressive win should see a very feeble vote for the District lightweight champion.

Semifinal—Young Raspi, Baltimore, vs. Johnny Dean, Charlotte, N. C., lightweights, 6 rounds. Rated C. Sometimes Dean can get going and sometimes he can't. The last time he fought Raspi, he couldn't get started and the result was a draw. We think he'll gather momentum tonight and take a decision from the Baltimore belter.

Preliminaries—Bobby Dechter, Philadelphia, vs. Nick Camaretta, New Orleans, lightweights, 6 rounds. Rated D. Dechter got a draw with Frankie Litt the last time out and Camaretta held Ray Boreo to stalemate on the same card. Litt is a better fighter than Boreo, which makes Dechter the logical winner tonight.

Joey Temes, Florida, vs. Harry Jeffra, Baltimore, featherweights, 6 rounds. Rated D. Jeffra will give the highly-regarded Temes fits for a while, but class will tell and Temes should win the award.

The Cowboy Gets His Orders

At the Post . . .

En Route to Pimlico, May 3.

Dear Al:

The less said about my Derby picks, the better, although I didn't get a fair roll when Granville lost his rider at the break. However, I was just as "high" on Teufel, the other half of the Belair Stud entry, and he had no excuses as I saw the race. I would like to make a public apology to Brevity for having doubted his staying ability. He finished as if he could run all day and all night. In fact, Wayne Wright had difficulty in bringing him to a walk after the race. I saw several Benningites at the Derby, proving that some of them are still in the money. Clocker Mike played two bucks on Bold Venture by default. It was this way: One of the Derby vacationists at the hotel had a terrible hangover but wanted to be able to tell the folks back home that he had played the winner. So he gave Mike a list of five horses with instructions to play each to win. Mike lost the list but he decided to protect himself. When he saw the short early prices on Brevity and Indian Broom he resolved to "book" those and invest the $10 in five others. One of the bets went on Bold Venture. When Mike returned to the hotel, he found the slip on the dresser. Bold Venture, the $43 winner, was not on the list.

BILL.

First race—In Front appears to have the edge on this field of sprinters. Beaten a neck last out in fair time, he needs to improve only slightly to hold these safe. Iron Ore obviously needed that last and will be dangerous. Alt, winner last out, picks up 13 pounds. Sparky may need more route.

Second race—Daniel Soot seems as good as anything in the day's steeplechase. The veteran failed to win a race last year, but has worked well. Royal Thomas is reported ready and may take second money. Briar Blue ran a good race last week and is a possibility.

Third race—Jack Patches, winner by a city block last out, appears to be the best bet of the day. Any price will be a good one. Narise went evenly in a recent sprint and has won at this route. Jusia Glider's last was fair.

Fourth race—Wickliffe, a bang-up third in his previous outing, drops 6 pounds and appears to have a spot made to order for him. Inflice comes out of the same race and appears to be a fit horse. Relativity, out only once in Maryland, could awake.

Fifth race—Bubbling Spring tired after chasing Prince Turley last out but deserves the call in this field. This filly beat Steel Cutter last year. Jakovia finished in close quarters last out. Distracting won here last week and is dangerous.

Sixth race—I'm going to try to slip over a long shot in this event. The Bailiff is slated to carry a feather impost of 99 pounds. He was a speed star on the West Coast last winter but has done nothing hereabouts. This looks like the right day. Star Porter and Zay are the ones to beat.

Seventh race—Making Time should take the juvenile race. He was off in a tangle last out and seems capable of handling the 119 pounds assignment. Pass Em By, in new hands could surprise. Flaming Belle is said to be a good filly.

Eighth race—Hard Chase ran a remarkable race last out at odds of 188-1 and for a mediocre rider to be beaten a head. Needs only to repeat that effort. Dearzin and Dona Dulcin for the other awards. Tight Wad is long overdue.

Best bet—Jack Patches.

Holland Netmen Win.

Monte Carlo, May 3 (AP).—Holland clinched a berth in the second round of the European zone Davis Cup tennis competition today as Timmer defeated Landau in the singles, 6—2, 6—3, 6—1, to give Holland three victories as against one defeat by the Monaco team.

Holland will meet France, victor over China, in the second round.

Greens Bother U. S. Curtis Cup Team

By the Associated Press.

Gleneagles, Scotland, May 3.—Lightning-fast greens, almost as slick as those that took a heavy toll of shots in the United States Open at Oakmont last year, worried America's Curtis Cup players today as they drilled for the international matches against England.

With the matches but two days away, the Americans still do not feel at home on the greens. A constant breeze, which sweeps the inland course and changes its direction on almost every round, adds to the difficulty in getting acquainted with the championship layout.

Most of the players played two rounds today but there was only one bit of notable scoring. Charlotte Glutting and Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite took turns in batting the ball around and posted a 77 to equal women's par. All the others were too intent on their practice to shoot a real medal round.

Patty Berg accompanied Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews to church in the morning and played an afternoon round, scoring an 82. She said the slick greens almost have her whipped.

"The course, itself, is dead easy," said Patty, "but the greens are like a skating rink. No amount of backspin will make the ball hold."

British observers, after watching the two rival squads practice, believe the home girls have fine prospects for scoring their first victory in the matches.

Women's Golf Tourney Is Shifted to Elkridge

Originally scheduled for Suburban Country Club, Baltimore, the Middle Atlantic women's golf championship will be played at Elkridge Hunt Club, it was learned last night.

It will be held the week of October 16, with Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, as defending champion.

Dentistry Alumni Plans To Honor G. U. Class

Members of Georgetown University's graduating class in dentistry will be honored at a reception and banquet given by Dentistry School almuni, it was announced yesterday by Dr. J. F. Manley, president of the alumni unit. The banquet will be held May 23 in the recreation hall at the university.

Dr. David Fitzgibbons has been named by President Manley to head the committee in charge of arrangements for the affair. Other annual committee heads named were Dr. A. G. Miller, essay; Dr. Wilfred Johannsen, publicity; Dr. Francis Price, membership, and Dr. Phil Robin, clinics.

Campbell Out Remainder Of Season

Physician Declares His Playing Days Are Far From Over.

Boston, May 3 (U.P.).—Though Bruce Campbell, Cleveland Indians' star rightfielder thrice afflicted with spinal meningitis, probably will be out of the line-up for the rest of the season, reports that his playing days are over are premature, Dr. William T. O'Halloran, attending physician, told the United Press tonight.

"If Campbell can pull through his present illness—and I believe he has a 50-50 chance—I see no reason why he can't return to the game next year," the physician said. "He'll be out at least three months, however, and very likely the rest of this season."

Meanwhile, the Cleveland star, stricken with meningitis for the third time in nine months while en route here from New York with his teammates Thursday night, remained in serious condition at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. His name still was on the danger list.

Dr. O'Malloran said "there is always the danger of a complication or two setting in. If the spinal canal becomes blocked a skull operation will be necessary. Then there is the danger of paralysis."

Mrs. Margaret Campbell, who came here from Cleveland when she learned her son was stricken, was at his bedside.

Campbell was first stricken with meningitis last August 3 while Cleveland was playing in Detroit and was forced from the line-up for the rest of the year. In October, he suffered a recurrence of the malady.

County Athletes Face Busy Week

Eight baseball games, a trio of golf matches, a dual track meet and for Montgomery County high schools this week, with Montgomery-Blair High participating in 5 of the 13 events.

The Blairites open today with a golf match with the little Hoyas at Garrett Park. Four ball games are slated tomorrow, Blair entertains Washington and Lee at Silver Spring, Bethesda plays host to Woodrow Wilson at Leland, and Damascus treks to Rockville, and Sherwood to Gaithersburg in intra-county battles. Bethesda's golf match with Devitt is the only contest on Wednesday and their tennis match at Columbia C. C. with Gonzaga is the lone Thursday encounter.

Friday has Rockville entertaining Gaithersburg in a county game, while Blair, county leader, is host to Charlotte Hall and Bethesda's crack team, upset victor over Eastern last week, meets Washington and Lee at Ballston.

Three sports are on tap Saturday, Bethesda plays a golf match with St. John's, and Blair's track and baseball teams conclude the week, the former in a dual meet with the Maryland freshmen at College Park, and the nine traveling to Baltimore to meet the powerful Mount St. Joe's nine, conquerer of three Distriet of Columbia high schools.

Intracounty standing:

Blair	3	0	Gaithersburg	1	1
Damascus	3	1	Montgomery	1	3

Tew Captures Olsen Golf Tourney

By Dave Herman.

Phil Tew, who now and then breaks out with a rash of pars and birdies, played some inspired golf yesterday to win the Ed E. Olsen trophy tournament at Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

Tew posted a 78-12—66.

Deadlocked for runner-up honors were W. Weber, 84-17—67, and T. W. Grant, 89-22—67.

The Olsen tournament, played in the morning and early afternoon, was a part of what was to have been a big golfing program at Kenwood. But ole Jupe Pluvius stepped in around 3 p. m., and broke up the Maryland State handicap team matches between Kenwood and Indian Spring.

Most of the contestants in the team matches had just reached the turn when the rainstorm broke and drove them into the clubhouse. From unofficial sources came the report that Kenwood was out in front when the storm descended.

Ralph Bogart, 16-year-old golfer, is setting the pace in the Army and Navy Country Club spring tournament by virtue of his 76, four over par. He is the only golfer thus far to break 80 in the tournament. Participants have until next Sunday to qualify, after which match play will begin. Maj. Dick Sutherland, Club Champion G. F. Space and Lunn Steele will be among those qualifying this week.

Over the week-end three of Washington Golf and Country Club's topnotchers did themselves proud. Jimmy Corcoran, the fearless, popped out a 69, one under par, after going out in 34. R. T. (Lefty) Harrell, with a sizzling 33 on the outgoing side, scored a 71, and Dr. Calvert E. Buck, club president, shot a 37, 35—72. Dr. Buck was off to a flying start when he anchored his tee shot 20 feet from the pin on the first hole. Yes, he got a birdie.

Jess Baggett, veteran golfer, had a chance to clip or level par yesterday just before the thunder started clapping over the Beaver Dam course. Needing his 4 for an even 72, Jess overshot the home green with his second, pitched on nicely, then missed a short putt. He took a 5 for a 37—36—73.

Keen battles are expected tomorrow awhen the District women's first, second and third teams resume firing. First team matches will be played at Woodmont. Congressional, leading in the first team matches, draws a bye. Chevy Chase opposes Kenwood at 9:40; Columbia meets Indian Spring at 10:05 and Manor tackles Army and Navy at 10:30.

Second Teams.

9:15, Beaver Dam vs. Kenwood; 9:40, Army and Navy vs. Chevy Chase; 10:05, Congressional vs. Washington; Columbia, bye.

Third Teams.

9:15, Beaver Dam vs. Manor; 9:40, Army-Navy vs. Kenwood; 10:05, Congressional vs. Kenwood; 10:30, Chevy Chase vs. Columbia.

E. S. Cassedy, 87—15—72; R. J. Tasson, 88—16—72; R. M. Lawrenson, 84—12—72; Dr. Dixon, 79—8—71; F. C. Olmsted, 76—5—71; Sam Harver, 79—7—71, and J. Brooke, 93—18—75.

Some Putt-Putts . . .

Charlie Beall, Georgetown University golfer, lost his match to Burkett, of Penn State, at Columbia Saturday on the twenty-first hole when his second shot hit a tree and bounded back 50 feet . . . Beaver Dam's big tournament for the Grosner Cup comes off next Sunday . . . Martin F. McCarthy played his first round of the season at Beaver Dam last week . . . Jim Hanson, of Bath, Me.; Sam Silan and Mark Bennett, members of Rudy Vallee's orchestra, played Indian Spring's course yesterday . . . They are real golf addicts . . . The much-delayed East Potomac spring tournament will begin next Monday . . . Harry Graham expects a banner field . . . Page Cornwell, young Columbia golfer, was a member of Penn's team which played in the intercollegiate matches at Columbia . . . Fred McLeod and W. W. Hinshaw, the former opera star, play together practically every morning . . . Gene Larkin's golf class for Woodmont women golfers opens Thursday . . . and Cliff Spencer will have his inaugural class May 13.

Frederick Hustlers Beat D. C. Red Sox, 5-4

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 3.—The Frederick Hustlers were outhit, 11 to 5, here today, but managed to nose out the Washington Red Sox in the opening game of the season, 5-4. A pair of walks, a sacrifice, stolen base and a single by Gardenr provided the Hustlers with the winning runs in the seventh. Wildness by Pohl and two costly errors contributed to the defeat of the visitors.

Financial and Business News of the Day

Railway Orders Running Half 12-Yr. Average

Total of $593,025,000 for Last Year Was Less Than 1934.

Renewed railroad buying in anticipation of improved railroad traffic is reflected in a report on equipment orders made public yesterday by the Association of American Railroads. New freight cars of all types on order by the Class I railroads of the United States totaled 13,562 on April 1, 1936, compared with 482 cars on order at the same time last year.

New steam locomotives on order April 1, this year, totaled 52, compared with one on the same date last year. Twenty-four new electric locomotives were on order this year, compared with 61 electrics on order April 1, 1935.

New passenger equipment on order April 1, this year, called for 69 cars as against 76 cars on the same day last year.

In the first three months of this year, 2,984 new freight cars were placed in service in this country, compared with 568 cars in the corresponding three months of 1935. For the entire year of 1935 there were 8,903 new freight cars placed in service.

Improvement Work.

In addition to increased orders placed for new cars and locomotives, substantially larger sums have been authorized this year for general improvement work on track, bridges, structures and other equipment. Nearly twice as many tons of rail were ordered during the first three months of this year as in the first three months of 1935.

Railway purchases in 1935 aggregated $593,025,000, which was slightly below the purchases in 1934, but considerably higher than those of 1933, according to reports filed by the railroads with the Bureau of Railway Economics. This compares with the annual average of $1,100,000,000 for the 12 years, 1923-1934, and with $1,329,535,000 for the year 1929, the last year of full railroad activity.

Ill. Central Loss Rises $6,967,753

Chicago, May 3 (AP).—The 86th annual report of the Illinois Central Railroad Co. will disclose tomorrow that total income of the system for 1935 was $7,529,256, a decrease of 48 per cent, compared with the 1934 figure, which, after fixed and other charges, left a deficit of $9,932,399, compared with a deficit of $2,964,646 the previous year.

Operating revenues increased 7 per cent to $97,496,696, but expenses advanced 20 per cent to $81,853,579. It was explained $9,149,178 was included in operating expenses in connection with the Public Works Administration loan, and of the total charged to expense $7,750,205 was actually expended in 1934.

Freight revenue increased 8 per cent while passenger revenue decreased 5.68 per cent, although, excluding Chicago suburban traffic, the decrease in the latter was less than 1 per cent.

Square D Net Profit 25c a Share in Quarter

Square D Co. in the first three months of this year had net profit of $122,232, after charges and Federal taxes, equal to 25 cents per share on 220,650 shares of class B common stock outstanding, after deducting the regular quarterly dividend of 55 cents per share on 123,170 shares of class A preferred stock. This compares with profits of $132,135 for the first quarter of 1935.

For the 12 months ended March 31, 1936, net profit was $716,581, equal to $2.02 per share on the outstanding class B common stock, after deducting the full annual dividend of $2.20 per share on the class A preferred stock.

These figures are comparable to net profit for the 12 months ended March 31, 1935, amounting to $478,252, equal to 94 cents per share on the present outstanding class B common stock, after allowance for $2.20 annual dividend on the class A preferred stock.

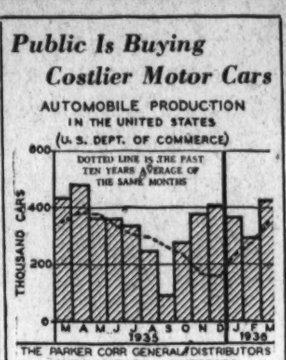
Public Is Buying Costlier Motor Cars



Boston, Mass., May 3.—Automobile production is proceeding full speed ahead. Although March production was just slightly under that of a year ago, the first quarter of this year exceeded the same 1935 months by 2½ per cent. New-car registrations in March reveal that there were more than twice as many of the more expensive makes registered than in March of last year.

New High Peak In Gold Output Seen This Year

Russia, Second Largest Producer, May Top 10,000,000 Ounces.

New York, May 3.—"The available figures for the first two months of this year indicate that the world output of gold will probably make another record in 1936," says the monthly letter of the National City Bank. "The Union of South Africa, Canada and the United States, which are the first, third and fourth largest producers of gold, each mined practically 100,000 ounces more gold than during the same period last year. Soviet Russia, now the world's second largest producer of the yellow metal, recently announced a plan to step up her output to over 10,000,000 ounces in 1936, or almost double the 1935 production.

"Even if only a small part of the Russian expansion program is realized, the world output of gold will easily reach another record level, possibly 33.35 million ounces of gold, and even higher figures are expected by some. This would be the fifth consecutive year since 1931 in which the output of gold has exceeded the old previous record made in 1915.

"Production of gold declined materially after the close of the war and the low point was reached in 1922, when only 15.4 million ounces were extracted. This decline obviously was due to the rise of mining costs while the coinage value remained the same. From then on production rose slowly, remaining at a level of 16,000,000 to 20,000,000 ounces for most of the postwar decade.

"The combined stimulation of the decline in commodity prices after 1930, and the increasing premium on gold in terms of devalued currencies, reversed the trend of gold output. Gold production was encouraged in all lands where a trace of gold could be found, and by 1932 all previous records, even that of 1915, had been shattered by a wide margin.

"Attracted by the possibilities of large profits, new capital flowed into gold mining and older ones extended. Old mining camps, dead since the days of the Western gold rush, once more bustled with action and gold prospecting was stimulated even in the Southeast, Georgia and Alabama, where practically no gold had been mined in about 100 years."

Debits Decrease At Member Banks

Debits to individual accounts, as reported by banks in the leading cities for the week ended April 29, aggregated $8,310,000,000, or 5 per cent below the total reported for the preceding week and 10 per cent below the total for the corresponding week of last year.

Aggregate debits for the 141 cities for which a separate total has been maintained since January, 1919 amounted to $7,744,000,000, compared with $8,130,000,000 the preceding week and $8,693,000,000 the week ended May 1 of last year.

Graham-Paige Sales Gain 44 Per Cent

New York, May 3 (AP).—Graham-Paige Motors Corporation revealed today that April sales advanced 44 per cent over the same month of last year.

The Graham factory received orders in April for more than 4,000 cars, the largest number of orders for any month during the past year, it was stated.

Steel Industry Defies Stocks, Taxes, Politics

Vitality Persists After Continued Rise of Four Months.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 3.—After four months of the highest steelworks operations since the spring of 1930—four months in which the industry has averaged about 58 per cent—and despite the unsettling factors of an approaching national political campaign, impending tax legislation, and the stock market break, iron and steel demand continues to exhibit a surprising degree of vitality, says Steel.

Although the general decline in scrap buying and in scrap prices over the last two weeks also has created some uncertainty in the market, the general tone so far is one of steadiness, and steelmakers believe this will extend through the greater part of this month.

Last week there was a mild revival in purchasing of automobile material, and a still more notable spread in miscellaneous consumer orders. New specifications were in sufficient volume to replace most of the current shipments, and the steel rate held at 69½ per cent.

Following nine consecutive weekly gains automobile assemblies turned down slightly, 118,700 units, comparing with the peak of 120,500 in the preceding week. April output topped 500,000 cars, the fifth largest month in the industry's history; only in March, April, May and June, 1929, were more cars produced. Much of the steel industry's hopes for May are based on predictions at Detroit that assemblies this month will be close to the April total. Leading automobile manufacturers have already begun buying machinery and tools in preparation for 1937 models.

Private construction work, though heavier, still fails to offset the lack of large public works projects such as featured the structural market in spring months in recent years, and shape awards in the week amounted only to 14,884 tons. Authorization by the Union Carbide Co., New York, of a $20,000,000 plant expansion program, is expected to require a large volume of structural steel. This is one of the outstanding private building projects to develop since 1929.

Three pipe lines also promise to develop substantial steel requirements shortly. Largest of these is a 360-mile line from Muskegon, Mich., to the Ohio River for the Old Dutch Refining Co., Muskegon. Continental Oil Co., Ponca City, Okla., has awarded a 79-mile welded line in western Kansas; and the Kentucky Natural Gas Corporation, Kansas City, Mo., a 24-mile line between Terra Haute and Montezuma, Ind.

Daily average pig iron production in April, 80,403 gross tons, was 21.8 per cent over March, while the month's total, 2,412,080 tons, was up 17.9 per cent. Output in the first four months this year, 8,326,437 tons, was 27.5 per cent heavier than in 1935. A net gain of 17 blast furnaces in April brought the total number operating at the close of the month to 143, largest since July, 1930.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Pause After Sharpest Break Since 1933; Anxiety on Politics; Business Good.

New York, May 3.—Last week brought at least a temporary stop to one of the sharpest declines in the stock market seen since July, 1933, the end of the first New Deal honeymoon. The remarkable bull market which began over a year ago reached its highest point on April 6, for industrial stocks. The price increase beginning from the low point of last year, March 18, was 72 per cent. The decline in the last three weeks of April wiped out only a part of the rise, the fall from the top amounting to 13 per cent.

Severe as it has seemed, especially last week when unusually thin markets developed and stocks crashed as much as 10 points in a single day, or in some instances on a single sale, and when many margin accounts were impaired, the decline so far has not been out of the ordinary in relation to the preceding rise. No great reminder is needed that no bull market can take place without frequent set backs, and the longer it goes without one the sharper the turn when it comes.

What seems to have created uneasiness this time is the circumstances under which the heaviest selling took place. The market had hesitated before when crises seemed to be developing in European affairs, when some especially obnoxious bill was before Congress, when some policy of the Administration was outlined in a manner to strike terror into the business world, or when some bad shock was given by industrial developments. This time the market has had a little of nearly everything, but nothing has been sharply defined.

Misleading Guesses.

In two recent talks President Roosevelt has reiterated his policy in favor of penalizing business at the supposed advantage of the individual who somehow is to receive shorter hours and higher wages as the cost of production inevitably goes up and he has been exasperatingly vague about the Government's spending policy. He even missed a guess on the size of this year's deficit by $3,000,000,000! The correct figure—double that of the President's guess and a record-breaking one for any nation at any time—had to be given the country by the Secretary of the Treasury (a few days later), but oddly enough the market was in rallying mood at the time. The implications will sink in later.

The European situation continues unsettled, but it is not now in the nature of a crisis. No recession in business has occurred, but on the contrary, the past two or three weeks have been a period of expansion of industrial activity and the publication of first quarter earning statements showing sizable gains over a year ago. Industrial managers are fairly unanimous in predicting further business improvement during the remainder of the year, but are less sanguine about maintenance of profit margins.

Passage by the House of the unsound corporation undistributed profits tax bill doubtless played a part in depressing sentiment in the securities market, but even that measure cannot be blamed for the whole thing, for many regard it, on short term, a possible stimulus to stocks. Other factors include the recent increase in margin requirements and procedure by the SEC authorities against alleged stock market manipulation. The cumulative effect has been considerable but since the prevailing influence on stock prices usually is business earnings, vague misgivings have arisen as a result of the market break.

Anxiety Deepens.

Those misgivings might be dismissed, as some are treating them, as quite unjustified. It is explained that the stock rise is sufficient cause for the reaction in prices and that some slackening in industry in the summer is entirely a seasonal development; that the stock market in short is anticipating no specially bearish development.

However, this time the position may not be quite so clearcut as all that. Anyone who has talked to business men, high and low, and in many parts of the country, cannot but have sensed a feeling of uneasiness. No one yet knows just what are the present policies of the Administration with regard to business and even less assurance than in former speeches has been given recently by the President. He still has, it is fair to assume, the idea he can catch votes by promising to take money from industry and the rich and by some hocus-pocus hand it over to others who want it.

The thought of the 1936 election has been a constant influence toward moderation in radical programs. No one can say what might have happened otherwise. Nothing may happen with the re-election of President Roosevelt, but the fact that the man cannot be predicted (nor trusted, so far as business is concerned) is beyond question having a restraining influence on business enterprise.

WAFD Party Seeks New Rule in Egypt

Cairo, May 3 (AP).—The powerful WAFD Party, which appears to have control of Parliament in the elections, will seek to establish a constitutional monarchy in Egypt on British lines, leaders said today.

WAFD leaders, bitter foes of British domination in Egypt, but heretofore ineffective because of the suspension of constitutional government, hope to make the young King Farouk the constitutional monarch when he becomes of age.

The immediate aim of the WAFD is to obtain control of the regency council.

WAFD leaders said they felt democratic government under WAFD control would meet democratic Britain half way in the negotiations for a new treaty and military alliance between the two countries.

They regard Britain as a natural ally for Egypt, providing Egypt is treated as an equal, and they are averse to Italian influence of any kind here. The WAFD and late King Fuad were often at loggerheads partly because Fuad spent much time in Italy and his sympathies appeared to be in that direction.

Brazil's Chief Backs Roosevelt Peace Plan

Rio de Janeiro, May 3 (AP).—President Getulio Vargas, in a message to the second congress of the second Brazilian Republic, today welcomed President Roosevelt's plan for a Pan-American peace conference and also announced the restoration of parliamentary immunities.

Lumber Production Heaviest This Year

The lumber industry during the week ended April 25 stood at 67 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 70 per cent of 1929 shipments. Reported production and new business were slightly higher than in the preceding week, production being the heaviest reported for the year to date.

Shipments were 3 per cent below those of the preceding record week, as reported by 4 per cent fewer mills, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important softwood and hardwood mills. Reported new business during the week ended April 25 was 2 per cent below output; shipments were 2 per cent above production. During the preceding week, shipments were 5 per cent above output; orders, 2 per cent below.

Bank and Surety Stocks at New Low

New York, May 3.—New York City bank stocks turned downward and established a new 1936 low during April, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster. The weighted average of 17 leading stocks opened April 1 at 55.56 and reached the month's high of 56.76 on April 6. Subsequently a decline set in, which continued to April 30, when the new 1936 low of 50.29 was reached.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market also declined to a new 1936 low during April in sympathy with general security markets. After reaching the month's high of 60.37 on April 6 the weighted average of 20 issues encountered a downward strend, which culminated in the new 1936 low of 54.09 on April 29. A moderate rally made the close slightly better at 54.37 on April 30.

George Dock Resigns Loan Bank Post

George Dock, jr., public relations adviser to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington during the past 2½ years, has resigned to take a position in the New York office of Doremus & Co., financial advertising agency, on June 1.

Before going to Washington, Mr. Dock was engaged in advertising work in St. Louis and in New York City for several years, as an executive in investment banking firms, and was a director of the Financial Advertisers Association.

Over a Billion Filed With SEC In 1st Quarter

March, With $583,000,000 Registrations, Was High Month.

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act shows that during the first quarter of 1936 over $1,071,000,000 of securities became fully effective, making the third successive quarter during which registrations approximated the billion-dollar mark. The quarterly total was raised by the new monthly high of more than $583,000,000 in March. During the first quarter of 1935—before refundings assumed large proportions—effective registrations amounted to slightly less than $178,000,000.

Manufacturing companies were the largest registrants, accounting for 37.6 per cent of the quarter's total registrations. Utility companies, which lagged during January, but resumed their lead as largest registrants during February and March, were second for the quarter as a whole with 33.7 per cent and financial and investment companies were third with 10.7 per cent of the aggregate registratoins.

During the January 1-March 31, 1936, period, 187 issues became fully effective, an average of $5,728,000 per issue as against an average of $3,235,000 for 55 issues in the same period of 1935. More than 95 per cent of securities registered during the first quarter of 1936 represented proposeed flotations by already established enterprises; less than 5 per cent were initial public offerings of newly organized companies.

About $162,000,000 of the securities effectively registered during the first quarter of 1936 were not intended to be immediately offered for cash sale for the account of the registrants.

Cotton Consumption At Record High Rate

New York, May 3.—World consumption of all growths of cotton continues to run at a record high rate for this time of the year. We estimate world all-cotton consumption during March at 2,356,000 bales, compared with 2,243,000 bales in February, and 2,193,000 in March last year. Consumption during the eight months of the season to the end of March totaled approximately 18,074,000 bales, compared with 17,167,000 in the same period last season.

Allowing for seasonal variation, world all-cotton consumption during the eight months to the end of March was at a full-season rate of about 26,800,000 bales. World all-cotton consumption last season totaled 25,428,000 bales. The largest in any past season was 25,778,000 bales, in 1928-29.

On The Air Today

That homecoming celebration for Kate Smith will be held tonight at Constitution Hall. Unfortunately, the thousands who would like to help observe the event cannot be accommodated even in so large a building—so those who are lucky enough to be present and see the two-hour gala show will be expected to tell their friends about it.

A highlight of the evening will be the presentation of a scroll to Kate, honoring her for her services to the Red Cross in connection with recent flood relief activities. James L. Fiesser, vice chairman of the Red Cross, will make the presentation.

And the biggest birthday cake believed ever presented to anyone in these parts, will go to the distinguished "hometown girl who made good." It will weigh 250 pounds.

WJSV's "Dream Girl" is getting some competition from WRC three times weekly, beginning tonight at 10:15. WRC's poetry reader will be known as "The Dreamer," and, unlike her sister of the air at WJSV, she will be identified. She is Mary Joan Doherty. In order to fulfill a life-long ambition, Mary Joan took special courses in poetry writing at Mary Wood College at Scranton. Tony Wons has read some of her verse on his "Friendly Philosopher" program. She will announce her own program, read the poems and now and then contribute original verse. For the first program—"Dedication," "Renunciation" and "Life Is Lovelier For Having Known You."

Guffey to Offer New Subsidy Bill

Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, said last night he would introduce a new ship subsidy bill in the Senate today in an effort "to break the legislative deadlock" in which existing ship legislation is caught.

Guffey, in a statement, declared his proposal, which supplants one he offered earlier, eliminated "a number of controversial sections which have caused threats of a filibuster against all pending bills" and was in line with President Roosevelt's requests for direct aid to the merchant marine.

The subsidy bill around which the main dispute centers was introduced by Chairman Copeland (Democrat), New York, of the Senate Commerce Committee.

Both would permit granting subsidies, based on the difference in costs of construction and operation of an American ship and one under a foreign flag.

The Copeland bill places a 50 per cent limit on a subsidy for construction. The Guffey bill fixes a 33½ per cent top. Neither bill sets up a limit on the operating subsidy.

Mexican Ship Grounded Off Lower California

San Pedro, Calif., May 3 (AP).—The motor freighter, Sauzal, carrying 12 men and owned by Abelardo Rodriguez, former president of Mexico, went aground today at Cape Falso, 800 miles south, near the lower tip of Lower California, the Coast Guard reported.

After the 97-foot freighter radioed its plight, the United Fruit liner Chiriqui reported the Sauzal was on a flat sandy beach and in no immediate danger.

By Morgan Baker.

North Dakota has entered the "quota filled" column of the civil service apportionment, as of April 30, according to the Civil Service Commission.

BAKER.

The apportioned service gained 356 employes in April by appointment, re-instatement, transfer and correction. At the same time the same lost 174 by separation and transfer.

Mrs. Sarah Grigg (P), Bureau of Reclamation, is observing this week the anniversary of her 32 years in Federal employment. Her office associates are congratulating her upon the recovery of her illness during the winter and her return to duty.

AAA Election Tomorrow.

Procurement of civil-service status for AAA employes through non-competitive examinations is one of the vital items on the program of Lodge 116, American Federation of Government Employes, John E. Dwyer, president, reminds the AAA workers on the eve of their election.

The AAA election of officers will be held tomorrow. Interest is centered in the presidency. Mr. Dwyer is opposed for re-election by John Collins. The ballot box will be located in the cafeteria on the eighth floor of the old Postoffice Building, between 8 a. m. and 3:55 p. m. Night-shift employes will find the ballot box in the watchman's guard room, first floor, from 4 to 9 p. m.

Members of the Resettlement Administration Press Club will meet at 8 p. m. tomorrow, seventh floor of the Adams Building, 1333 F street northwest.

Federal Tipex Delegates.

Several Federal agencies will be represented at the Third International Philatelic Exhibition, which opens in New York Saturday. Alvin C. Hall, director, and Jack Smith, superintendent, Postage Stamp Division, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Third Assistant Postmaster General Clinton B. Eilenberger, and Robert E. Fellers, superintendent, Stamp Division, Postoffice Department, will have charge of the Government exhibits.

There will be units from the Postoffice Department, Internal Revenue and the Smithsonian.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C appears after your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees in "Punch Bowl Revue;" screen, Loretta Young and Franchot Tone in "The Unguarded Hour"); or to P, Loew's, Palace (Sylvia Sydney, Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda in the natural color "Trail of the Lonesome Pine"); or to C., Loew's Columbia (the Dionne Quintuplets and Jean Hersholt in "The Country Doctor").

National Museum's Division of Graphic Arts, under Ruel P. Tolman, announces an exhibition of drypoints by Ruth Doris Swett, mezzo-tints by Alexandro Mastro-Valerio at the Smithsonian Building until May 24.

Livestock Report Made.

Three members of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics have collaborated in a report on "Market Classes and Grades of Lambs and Sheep," just published. They are L. B. Burk, agricultural economist; C. E. Gibbons, senior marketing specialist (now with AAA), and M. T. Foster, associate livestock and meat technologist.

Applications Close Today.

Today is the last day to file applications for the stenographic and typist examinations at Civil Service Commission. The entrance salaries range from $1,260 to $1,620. It is expected that it will be several months before the thousands of applications are tabulated for the examination. Thus, numerous students will have an opportunity to finish their courses and veteran non-civil service stenographers and typists will have time to polish up their speed in time for the examinations.

Bureau of Home Economics.

Q. What are the functions of the Bureau of Home Economics?—Mrs. Kathryn J. Konig (F).

A. This branch of the Department of Agriculture conducts scientific studies of consumer problems, including foods and nutrition, economics, textiles and clothing, and housing and equipment. It supplies information to various Government agencies wanting data on consumption of various commodities in the home and assists in the establishment of policies governing the use of these commodities. It furnishes the homemaker results of its scientific research through bulletins, magazine articles and press releases, radio talks and exhibits. The bureau employs no field agents, but through the home demonstration agents under the extension service and the State colleges of agriculture is in close contact with homemakers and professional home-economics workers throughout the country.

Dry Leader Urges War Upon Liquor

"It is high time for true temperance patriots to throw off the defeatist attitude which brought on repeal; doff the blues, the livery of cowards; and resume the old-time militancy that characterized the anti-liquor movement 20 years ago," declared J. Raymond Schmidt at Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church last night.

Schmidt, who is vice chairman of the United Dry Forces, said that the "reaction to repeal has set in" and that "the effects of alcohol upon individuals and society have not been repealed."

He stated that places selling liquor "apparently operated to sell the drink habit to our women and girls as well the men and boys" and called for "a four-line attack on King Alcohol."

Mission Worker to Talk.

Miss Elizabeth Congdon, field representative of the McAll Mission, will address members of the Presbyterian Ministers' Association of Washington and vicinity at 11 a. m. this morning in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. She will discuss the work of her organization.

Union Will Fight Suits of Workers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., May 3.—Charles Curry, attorney retained by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, says the union will "fight to the last ditch" suits for $10,500 filed by three Staunton women, who charge that the union repudiated its pledge to reimburse them for time lost in case their union affiliation caused them to be deprived of work at the Staunton Manufacturing Co.'s plants here.

The suit will come to trial May 18. Each of the three former employes of the Greif Bros. plants here is seeking $3,500. They are Mrs. Frances Parrish, Mrs. D. A. Kiser and Miss Rosa Pryor.

They allege that when the union was attempting to organize the women and girls at the coat factories here in 1935 it promised women who lost their jobs through affiliation with the union would be compensated for time lost until new work would be found.

Fonda Sells Estate.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 3.—Birdwood, one of the show places of the Piedmont section, has been sold by its owner, Henry D. Fonda, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., to James DeWitt Wilde, of South Orange, N. J. Wilde expects to occupy the estate about July 1.

Few Senators Now Hold Fate Of New Tax Bill

By the Associated Press.

A survey of sentiment in the Senate Finance Committee on the Administration tax bill showed yesterday that its approval by that committee hinged on the votes of several Democratic Senators who have not yet committed themselves.

Nevertheless, Administration leaders, counting on the Democrats lining up for the measure in the end, expressed confidence it would be approved by the committee and passed by the Senate without any fundamental changes.

In fact, Congressional chieftains had their eyes turned toward the calendar, rather than the committee line-up, as they noted the long list of witnesses waiting to testify on the bill.

With at least a week more of hearings in prospect, they realize the tax bill forms the biggest question mark in plans for adjourning Congress before the national political conventions next month. Even should hearings be finished this week, it would be the middle of May before the complicated measure could reach the Senate floor.

Faces Long Debate.

There, it is certain to run into prolonged debate, not only on the bill itself, but on the "riders" that revenue bills always attract under Senate rules. Already there are threats of attempts to hook several other controversial legislative proposals onto it, including war taxes and an amendment to the social security law.

The other vital preadjournment measure—the deficiency bill with its $1,500,000,000 relief fund—is scheduled to come up late this week in the House and reach the Senate sometime next week. Despite the controversies surrounding relief, leaders said they were not so concerned over the time it would take to push it through as they were over the revenue bill.

G. O. P. to Oppose Bill.

Business critics who have been opposing the tax bill, will return to the Senate hearings today, when officials of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States are scheduled to appear.

With Republicans expected to vote solidly against the bill, a few dissenting Democratic votes would throw the committee against the tax bill. Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, already has declared against it and several of his colleagues still are hesitating.

Among the Democrats not yet ready to commit themselves on the bill are Senators Gerry, of Rhode Island; Clark, of Missouri; Byrd, of Virginia, and Bailey, of North Carolina. Bailey's questions during the public hearings have been more hostile on the surface than any others, but he said today he merely was seeking information.

"My whole attitude is one of inquiry," Bailey said. "I know how greatly this bill relates to the welfare of the industries of my State."

Favors Present System.

Nevertheless, Bailey suggested last week that the "most constructive way to balance the budget might be to let business recover as quickly as possible and realize increased revenue from present tax rates rather than to impose new levies.

While the Finance Committee resumes its tax hearings today, the Senate will begin debate on the Wheeler bill to strengthen the Federal Trade Commission law. The House will consider minor bills.

Before taking up the relief bill late this week, the House will try to get all the other regular appropriation bills, upon which conference agreements have been reached, out of the way. Back of the relief bill are the inflationary Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing mill and the Overton flood-control program for the lower Mississippi.

Townsend to Appear.

The House investigation of the Townsend old-age pension movement will be resumed before a special investigation committee tomorrow. Dr. F. E. Townsend, cofounder, will be the witness.

Matthew Woll, president of the America's Wage Earners Protective Conference, the tariff group of the American Federation of Labor, urged upon the Senate Finance Committee inclusion of an amendment to the tax bill to protect domestic products in large coastal communities in competition with products of foreign nations.

The amendment would direct the Secretary of the Treasury to collect an excise tax on the entry into this country on all products dutiable under the tariff act of 1930.

"Enactment of this amendment," says Woll, "will make possible the sale of American made or American produced goods and commodities at fair prices in our large coastal markets which are now dominated and controlled by foreign goods."

Dr. H. L. Northrop, NotedSurgeon,Dies

Philadelphia, May 3 (AP).—Dr. Herbert L. Northrop, 70, head of the department of surgery at Hahnemann Medical College, died today of bronchial pneumonia.

He taught for 40 years at Hahnemann. Among his students was Capt. Joel T. Boone, personal physician to former President Hoover.

While anesthetist at Hahnemann Hospital, he devised a method for producing anesthesia by combining oxygen and chloroform. It is still used at the hospital.

Man, Many Cattle Die As Train Leaves Rails

Northfield, Vt., May 3 (AP).—A Central Vermont Railway freight engine and two livestock cars left the rails here today, killing one man and 42 head of cattle.

A. H. Harvey, 40, of St. Albans, a brakeman, died in the cab of the locomotive when it struck the abutment of a short, single-span steel bridge. An official statement said the cause of the derailment was not determined.

Parley Spurs Hope for Peace In Balkan Area

Entente Diplomats Gather at Belgrade; Indicate Agreement Near.

By the Associated Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 3.—Hopes for preservation of European peace took an upward turn in this area today as Balkan premiers and foreign ministers gathered here for a Balkan Entente conference.

Premier John Metaxas of Greece, Foreign Mniister Tevfik Rustu Aras of Turkey and Nicolas Politis, Greek minister to Paris, arrived and gave indications that several major difficulties have been ironed out in preliminary exchanges of opinions. Greece, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Rumania form the Balkan Entente.

Outstanding among the difficulties of the inner Balkan nations was a Rumanian objection to the projected Turkish fortification of the Dardanelles. As the negotiators assembled it was indicated Turkey had proposed a formula at least partly satisfying Rumania.

Fear Blockade.

Rumania had feared that in case Turkey closed the Dardanelles Rumania would find her shipping and warships locked in the Black Sea.

It was indicated on good authority that Turkey is suggesting an agreement whereby she be allowed to fortify the Dardanelles and commit herself to a conference with other Balkan pact members before at any time closing the straits by military force.

A second disturbing question was proposed by Greece, which asked clarification on the point of whether the Balkan Entente members would be obliged to aid each other if one member is attacked by a nation outside the Balkan Peninsula.

Diplomatic circles made no secret that Greece is thinking of a possible conflict between Italy and Yugoslavia and is anxious not to be involved again.

Turkey proposed as a solution that the entente in such an emergency be guided by the League of Nations and not attack outsiders unless the League decides to do similarly.

The good auspices under which the Balkan Entente sessions are starting gave grounds for hope the Little Entente sessions here May 6 would find a compromise for acceptance of the fact of Austria's introduction of compulsory military service. (Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia compose the Little Entente.)

Yugoslav officials gave signs of cooling off after the first announcement of the Austrian step, which they said is in a violation of peace treaties.

AAA Heads Plan Publicity on Aid

By the Associated Press.

AAA officials yesterday worked on plans for making public all soil conservation subsidy payments in excess of $10.000 a year within a "reasonable" time after the checks have been mailed.

Secretary Wallace was reported to have requested his assistants to devise a publicity plan which is expected to be a complete revision of the AAA's former policy regarding payments to farmers.

Until the Senate adopted a resolution requesting Wallace to furnish a list of AAA payments of $10.000 or more a year, the AAA contended that names and specific amounts should not be made public. The secretary argued that farmers receiving payments would have been subjected to undue annoyances had their names and their benefits been made available.

Record-Size Left Span Placed in N. Y. Bridge

New York, May 3 (AP).—The largest lift span ever installed on a bridge was raised into position in 16 minutes today under the eyes of city officials, Government engineers and curious thousands of spectators.

The span, 310 feet long and 93 feet wide, was floated across the Harlem River to its position as a unit of the Tri-borough bridge which will connect the boroughs of Manhattan, Queens and the Bronx.

Cables were attached at high tide and as the subsiding water tightened them and let the span swing free from its supporting barges the hoisting to the position 55 feet above the river began. From this normal position it can be lifted to a height of 135 feet above the surface to permit large vessels to pass.

35,000 to Vote In 6th District Congress Race

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 3.—Between 35,000 and 40,000 Sixth Congressional District voters of both parties are expected to go to the polls tomorrow to choose candidates for Congress, and to register for or against the New Deal Administration of President Roosevelt.

Party leaders expected a 40 per cent vote in the District, which embraces the Western Maryland counties of Montgomery, Frederick, Washington, Allegany and Garrett.

Interest centered mostly in the Republican Congressional contest, where seven are seeking the nomination, the greatest number ever to enter a primary contest for the Congressional nomination.

The chief concern of organization Democrats of the District was the possibility of apathy among party voters. Many observers conceded the nomination of Representative David J. Lewis over his opponent, Clay Plummer, of Montgomery County.

Roosevelt Vote.

Some of the vote Plummer will receive is expected to be east in the election in November for the Republican candidate. This group, however, is expected to vote for Roosevelt in the primary. Dr. Charles Conley, one of the leaders of the former anti-Ritchie faction has indicated he will support Roosevelt.

In the Republican contest for the Congressional nomination, State Senator Harry Legore, of Frederick County, was conceded the best chance of winning the nomination. He has the support of the Nice group in his own county, and is expected to poll a sizable vote in both Washington and Montgomery counties. In Washington County Legore is said to have the support of many of the so-called Old Guard Republicans.

The four candidates from Allegany County are expected to split the vote there. It is expected that A. Charles Stewart and Perry A. Nicklin will receive the largest vote in their home county. Former Judge Albert A. Doub, of Allegany County, will no doubt receive a large vote in his own county and Washington County.

Assured Support.

Another State Senator, Ernest W. Miller, of Washington County; Thomas L. Popp, Allegany County, and Leo Weinberg, Frederick County, have been assured considerable support by whirlwind campaigns throughout the district.

The fact that there are no fights for delegates to the State Presidential conventions of either party will also tend to reduce the number of votes polled, leaders say. The Republicans will indorse Gov. Nice, while Breckinridge, who is opposing Roosevelt, has made no efforts to obtain votes in the Sixth District.

Woman's Slayer Believed Maniac

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 3 (AP).—The theory a former suitor brutally murdered Mrs. Eula Mae McConnell was announced today by a police who said they were convinced the 23-year-old housewife was the victim of a maniac.

Working around the clock, investigators ran down every lead without an arrest or a pronouncement that a trace of the killer had been uncovered.

Mrs. McConnell, mother of 22-month-old twin girls, died Friday of a terrific beating received in a mysterious attack while she was alone in her fashionable apartment the day before.

Her abdomen bore the imprint of a new rubber shoe heel and her jaw was fractured. Except for a flimsy shirtwaist, the clothing had been ripped from her body.

Nothing was missing from the apartment and hospital attendants said she had not been criminally assaulted.

Whispering deliriously, the 23-year-old mother said she might have known her assailant, whom she described as a "white man, well dressed," leading police to believe she possibly was attacked by a rejected suitor. They were dubious, however, because of her semi-conscious condition and an investigation failed to support this angle.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 3.—Unconfirmed reports that the Japanese admiralty is considering laying down a 55,000-ton battleship, armed with 21-inch guns, brought open fears in London today that the latest naval treaty may never be effective.

While officials stated no confirmation for the reports had been received, the effect of such building was discussed in the press.

A columnist for the Evening Star said if Japan undertakes to build such a giant ship it "will blow the new London naval treaty and all American and European naval calculations and understandings to smithereens."

The British, meanwhile, are proceeding on the basis that the treaty will become effective.

Contingent upon ratification by the three signatories, the United States, Great Britain and France, the treaty becomes effective next January 1. But the document is so full of safe-guarding and escape clauses that almost any excuse could be used to back out of the agreement.

Disquieting news that Japan, which bolted the naval conference two months before the treaty was drawn, will discuss no information on naval building plans has led to fears here that either the United States or Great Britain may find it expedient to denounce the pact.

These Japanese reports appear to have blasted all hopes Japan would find it possible either to join the treaty or tacitly conform with its provisions for tonnage limitation and exchange of shipbuilding information.

One major agreement of the treaty, that of reduction of battleship gun calibers from 16 to 14 inches, automatically expires next April 1 unless Japan and Italy both have agreed to it.

The Anglo-Italian tension gives little prospect Mussolini will sign the treaty at any early date, and naval circles feel no Japanese government would dare give its consent to the treaty for fear of military opposition.

Signature of the document was accompanied by British promises to push negotiations with Germany and Russia for bilateral treaties incorporating the provisions of the tri-lateral pact.

Germany, although agreeing to negotiate in principle, has given no indication of willingness to discuss facts. Russia has notified Britain of willingness to talk terms.

Under escape clauses, any of the signators could release itself from obligations of the pact if involved in war, if a non-signator acquired, or even proposed to acquire, ships in excess of the treaty limitations, or should a signator feel that its national security had been materially affected by any change of circumstances.

Labor Heads Here; Split Threatens

By the Associated Press.

Talk of a split in t he American Federation of Labor persisted in labor circles last night as federation chieftains gathered here for an executive council meeting.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and William Green, A. F. of L. president, were the main figures in the discussion, centering around the controversy over industrial unionism that has divided the federation into two waring camps.

Labor men agreed that this fight would be the principal issue before the council when it assembles tomorrow, with Lewis and his supporters contending that all the workers in each big industry should be organized into one big union.

Green is spokesman for those who believe workers, as a ruls, should be organized by craft. They now control the executive countil, 16 to 1. The industrial unionists' lone spokesman since Lewis resigned from the council last fall is David Dubinsky, president of the Ladies Garment Workers.

Farley Rule Sought In Arizona Dispute

Tucson, Ariz., May 3.—Arizona Democratic factions announced today they will carry to James A. Farley, their party's national committee chairman, the disagreements of a State convention so stormy that a Roosevelt critic was floored by a fist and police were called in.

Farley will be asked to decide whether the present national committeeman and committeewoman have to retain their posts, as contended by forces backing State Chairman W. P. Stuart, or whether they have been replaced, as held by backers of R. G. Langmade, Phoenix.

Langmade's group, convening in a darkened hall with police on the alert, chose their own committee members and adopted a resolution instructing for Roosevelt.

Student Flier Killed Practicing for Permit

Witnesses said the undercarriage struck a tree and the ship plunged nose first to the ground.

Blast Hurts 9 Firemen.

St. Louis, May 3 (AP).—Nine firemen received minor injuries in a chemical explosion today while fighting a fire in a manufacturing plant here. They were treated at City Hospital for face and hand burns suffered when chemicals stored in the plant exploded from contact with water. All are expected to recover.

Culbertson on Bridge

When your partner opens the bidding with one no trump there are two things you must keep in mind:

1. Your partner has 4-3-3-3 distribution, the worst possible distribution in support of a trump suit.

2. Your average expectancy is game when the combined hands hold six honor tricks, or five and one-half honor tricks with many honor cards, or an easily established five-card or longer suit.

If you hold about one and one-half honor tricks you should raise to two no trump. Even with only one plus honor trick you should raise if your hand contains a five-card suit headed by at least the queen. For example, if your partner bids one no trump, and you hold spade Q 8 6 5 3, heart A 7 2, diamond 9 5 4, club 8 3, you should bid two no trump. Likewise, raise to two no trump with spade 6 4 2, heart K 8 5 3, diamond A 7 6, club 8 5 2, or with spade A Q 6 4 3, spade 7 5, diamond 8 6 4, club 7 5 2.

Do not forget that when your hand contains a large number of honor cards, the honor trick requirement for any no trump bid or raise if your hand contains four or more honor cards.

Thus, you raise your partner to two no trump holding spade Q J 3, heart Q 7 5 2, diamond 8 6 4, club Q 8 7.

A Bidding Pitfall.

South, dealer.

NORTH
♠ Q J 10
♥ 9 7 2
♦ 8 5 4

WEST
♠ 5 2
♥ Q J 10 5
♦ J 10 7 6

EAST
♠ 8 6 4 3
♥ 6 4
♦ Q 3 2

SOUTH
♠ A K 9 7
♦ A K 9

Some of the best players reached unmakeable slams. In a few cases the South hand was opened with a two bid, the six honor tricks proving irresistible. With that opening, a slam contract hardly could be voided.

But even some of the Souths that properly started with a bid of one spade reached a slam by later overenthusiasm. North had slightly too much to bid one no trump. A single raise in spades was chosen as the best response in every case. After that there were different bids at almost every table. Some Souths made an asking bid in clubs and, getting a positive answer, unwarrantedly went to a slam. Others jumped in hearts and refused to be signed off short of six odd.

Actually, despite the imposing array of aces and kings, South has no right, on a single raise from partner, to contract for twelve tricks. It is true that North's distribution is unfavorable, but it must be noted that he could have his raise on many other and better distributions, without both the ace and king of clubs. He might have:

♠ 8 6 5 3, ♥ 9, ♦ Q J 8, ♣ A 10 6 5 2

♠ Q J 8 6, ♥ 9 5 4, ♦ 6 3, ♣ A 10 6 2
